100 acre conservation site viewed

Golf course feasibility study continues

WILMINGTON - Members of the Golf/Recreation Feasibility Study Committee continue to research the development of an 18 hole golf course in Wilmington. They are currently focused on 100 acres of conservation land located between the northern section of Ballardvale Street and the Andover town line.

In 1975, the town took the land by eminent domain after Town Meeting ballot casters approved $169,000 for payment of the 155 acre parcel of land. To ensure the protection of the land from development, the whole tract was entrusted to the Conservation Commission in 1988.

Before a golf course project could be developed, the Conservation Commission would need to place its stamp of approval. "The parcel of land is a well developed forest area. It is the last piece of undeveloped land in Wilmington. I cannot speak for the commission members, but I feel they would have some concerns," said John Keeley, Conservation Administrator for the Town of Wilmington.

The Board of Selectmen feel this is an idea that should have some consideration. "This is a service well worth having for the town. We should explore all the possibilities of this project," said Michael Newhouse, town selectman.

The Board of Selectmen commissioned the Golf/Recreation Feasibility Committee to explore the development of a town owned golf course last year. Two members of the Board of Selectmen are on that committee, Michael Newhouse and James Rooney.

The members of the committee are preparing a proposal due to be completed in the next couple of months. They plan to present the proposal for the Conservation Committee to review. "We have a long way to go before this becomes a reality. We need the support of all the concerned parties," said Newhouse.

One of the arguments for the golf course is the amount of revenue it Hillview and Gannon. A project like this could help fund our tax base," said Robert Cain, town selectman.

At this stage there are more questions than answers. If the Conservation Committee deems the golf course a poor concept for use of that land, it is back to the drawing board for the Golf/

Town manager gets 12 percent raise

By SEAN DEVLIN

WILMINGTON - On Monday evening, the Board of Selectmen approved a proposal to increase Town Manager Michael Caira's salary by 12 percent, or approximately $9,899, over the next three years. With the salary hike, Caira will be earning $88,695 annually by the year 2000.

Caira's salary will increase by five percent over the next fiscal year and gradually drop to three percent in the third and final year of the raise.

Although the majority of selectmen approved of the pay increase, Selectman James Rooney voted against the raise, feeling that it would not be suitable at this time.

"I have the utmost respect for Michael Caira, and I feel he is more than qualified," Rooney said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "The only problem I have with the raise is the percentage. It's my duty, as a selectman, to keep the town's costs down."

Another issue raised Monday night concerned the growing problem of Canada Geese inhabiting and destroying residential property.

After receiving a letter from George and Peggy Quinn of Frederick Dr. regarding this nuisance, Rooney suggested that the herding dogs could be used to frighten the geese away, since there is an ordinance that bans the discharge of firearms within 500 feet of a residential dwelling. The board decided that other, and possibly, more inexpensive methods of removing the bothersome geese should be explored upon consulting a wildlife and gaming official at an upcoming meeting.

In an interview Tuesday, the Quinns stated that they had contacted the Natural Heritage Endangered Species Program and were told that herding dogs may be ineffective, since the birds could return several days after they are scared off. In addition, the organization informed them that the fowl's population is increasing by at least 10 percent each year.

"It's a real problem, and it's not just here...it's all over the country. I want to be able to enjoy my land and I don't think that's too much to ask," said Peggy Quinn.

For '98 state election:

Voters could face 10 initiative petitions

WILMINGTON - Citizens calls to cut taxes on personal income and interest and dividend income, eliminate the tolls on state roads, and reform state campaign finance laws are among the new laws proposed for the 1998 statewide ballot, including Wilmington.

By Wednesday's 5 p.m., filing deadline, Attorney General Scott Harshbarger had received petitions for proposed laws on 10 different topics, marking the start of a multi-step process that could place one or more of the initiatives before the voters next year.

"This is a unique opportunity for citizens to make new laws and new public policy by popular vote," Harshbarger said.

"My legal responsibility is to determine whether these initiatives pass constitutional muster, and I won't take a person position on any specific proposal until after the certification process has run its course."

Long history

In a process established in 1918 when Massachusetts voters approved Article 48 of the state Constitution, Harshbarger must determine by Wednesday, Sept. 3, whether the proposals meet constitutional requirements and can be certified for filing with the Secretary of State.

The Massachusetts Constitution requires that proposed initiatives to be in the proper form for submission to voters; not be substantially the same as any measure submitted at either of the two preceding statewide elections; contain only subjects that are related or mutually dependent; and, not involve subjects that are specifically excluded from the initiative process by the state Constitution.

For example, a petition cannot be approved if it relates to religion, religious practices or religious institutions; the powers, creation or abolition of the courts; the appointment, compensation or tenure of judges; a specific appropriation of money from the General Fund; or infringes on other protected constitutional rights, such as trial by jury, freedom of the press, freedom of speech and others.

In all, a total of 26 petitions were proposed this year because some sponsors submitted more than one version of an initiative on the same topic. For example, supporters of the movement to abolish state road tolls offered six slightly different versions of their initiative.

The proposed constitutional amendment submitted this year seeking to impose terms limits on state officials will follow a similar but lengthier legal process toward the year 2000 statewide ballot that involves votes by the legislature in each of the next two sessions.

"I will conduct my review of these proposals in full cooperation with both the sponsors and opponents of the petitions," Harshbarger said. "I want to hear everyone's legal views before rendering a decision. The public policy merits of any initiative cannot play a role in certification judgments, but I welcome written comments from interested citizens and groups on the legal issues raised by any proposal."

Any aggrieved voter can ask the Supreme Judicial Court to review Harshbarger's rulings — a process that will be expedited with the assistance of the Office of the Attorney General.

Next deadline

If certified, an initiative is filed with the Secretary of State, requiring proponents to gather the signatures of 64,928 registered voters by Dec. 3. If enough signatures are collected, the proposal is sent to the Legislature.

If the Legislature fails to enact the measure by the first Wednesday of May, proponents must gather another 10,821 registered voter signatures by early July in order to get their initiative on the 1998 ballot.

In the 1995-96 election cycle, 26 initiative petitions were submitted, but only one made it to a statewide vote. In 1994, 42 initiatives were submitted, and nine made to the ballot.

Assistant Attorney General Per Sacks, deputy chief of the Government Bureau and elections counsel for the Office of the Attorney General, will coordinate the certification review.

HOW TO USE AN IRA TO PAY ESTATE TAXES

It is possible to use an IRA to pay estate taxes without actually liquidating the IRA, but one must proceed very, very carefully. The key elements, according to a Tax Court ruling, are these: the beneficiary of the IRA shall establish an irrevocable trust with children or grandchildren names as its beneficiaries; the trust administrator must be independent and not related to the client, so that no conflict of interest can be inputted; and then, when the original IRA owner or spouse dies, and estate tax is due, the estate executor can ask the trust for a loan from the IRA to pay the taxes. This assumes that no other liquid assets are available. If the trustee determines that such a loan, with a high enough interest rate, is prudent use of the funds, then the family business or real estate holdings won't have to be sold at an inopportune time in order to pay taxes. Payments should go back to the IRA, to accrue for benefit of the children. It takes tax expertise to structure effective estate plans. Talk to professionals at

Why not just pave it now?

by Stu Neilson

There is proposal for a golf course in North Wilmington. There are people who would have the Town of Wilmington start a business to go into competition with private businesses. They propose to take land that has been set aside for conservation and put greens and fairways on it. Greens and fairways. That sounds like conservation, right?

Greens and fairways are usually doused with chemicals to make them greener and fairer. Tuesday I heard a story on WBUR about the first in the nation golf course which would not be using huge amounts of chemicals. I do not expect that the Town of Wilmington would even consider that course.

Greens and fairways make lovely homes for squirrels, possum, deer, fox, raccoons, woodpeckers, and other woodland creatures which currently reside in the mal-used conservation land. NOT!

This proposal for "making money" on a current trend is preposterous. When the golf trend goes belly up (it might) the town will be stuck with an albatross. A multi million dollar money losing machine. The next step would be to try to make up some of that lost revenue by selling it off as industrial land, because the town "needs" the money.

If the town "needs" the money now, why not look to other business ventures. There are opportunities in many fields. The Town of Wilmington Municipal Pizza Shop is the first to spring to mind. Next we should look into the lawyering game. Lots of money there! Have you been injured in an auto accident? Call the attorneys at the Town of Wilmington.

We missed an opportunity just recently to make some real money. There was a vacant lot on Main St. It could be been had for just a few million. Town of Wilmington Used Car Emporium! Too bad some private enterprise snatched that one up. The paved it, too.

We could save all that trouble. We could pave all the conservation land now.

That's not kilowatts $182 K payment

WILMINGTON - As part of an ongoing commitment to its customers, the Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD) presented an in-lieu-of-tax payment of $182,044.34 to the Town of Wilmington in June. Wilmington will receive a second payment for the same amount from the RMLD on December 30, 1997.

Locally owned and operated, the RMLD has historically supported its four member communities, as evidenced by the in-lieu-of-tax payments totaling $300,526.19 presented in June to Reading, North Reading, Wilmington and Lynnfield. Municipal utilities advocate for, and financially support, the communities they serve. A hometown electric utility is an asset to communities like Wilmington which are fortunate to be served by one of the 2000 municipally-owned public power utilities in the U.S.

The payment to Wilmington represents two percent of the RMLD's net plant in the community, based on a formula using the gross amount of kilowatt-hour (kWh) usage.

Letters to the editor

For the good of all

Dear Larz:

The following is a letter I sent to President Clinton. I would like to urge all Americans to support Executive Order #12606 by sending a letter to the President. He privately canceled the Order back in April which points the implications for families in the future to an ominous direction.

Dear Mr. President:

I would like an explanation as to why you canceled Executive Order #12606, which was set up by President Reagan to protect families from bureaucrats and politicians back in 1987. The order prohibited government from taking action until it had answered seven specific questions:

1.) Does this action by government strengthen or erode the stability of the family and, particularly, the marital commitment?

2.) Does this action strengthen or erode the authority and rights of parents in the education, nurture and supervision of their children?

3.) Does this action help the family perform its functions, or does it substitute governmental activity for the function?

4.) Does this action by government increase or decrease family earnings? Do the proposed benefits of this action justify the impact on the family budget?

5.) Can this activity be carried out by a lower level of government or by the family itself?

6.) What message, intended or otherwise, does this program send to the public concerning the status of the family?

7.) What message does it send to young people concerning the relationship between their behavior, their personal responsibility and the norms of our society?

These questions took two years of work to be established, including public hearings and debate within the federal bureaucracy. Why, after two years to be established and 10 years of working effectively, is it canceled? Please don't answer the questions easily by stating that there are orders that deal with environmental and children's health issues that make the protection of families unnecessary, unless you have hard facts and specific agencies to back it up. Executive Order #12606 had been established for the protection of families, for the good of all. I can only assume that it was canceled because it prohibited the government or political activists to advance their own purposes. I look forward to hearing your explanation.

Sincerely,
Maria Galante

A real Wilmington heroine

by Capt. Larz Neilson

Mrs. Ruth Childs of Linda Road, Wilmington, and her daughter, Susan Caron of Framingham appeared in a picture on the front page of the Town Crier in the edition of July 30. Like other local residents it was the historical exhibition in which they were interested. The exhibit was shown to the selectmen and others two weeks ago.

Ruth had a special historical privilege, of which the present selectmen of Wilmington are possibly unaware. Her mother, Mrs. Olive Sheldon was, for many years clerk to the Wilmington selectmen. She attended all their meetings and did errands for them.

Olive worked in the Town Hall in many capacities. She was not a woman who was "temporarily employed." In addition to being the clerk of the selectmen, she walked all over the town of Wilmington doing a government census, during a bitterly cold winter; she was a warden during the voting time in the Town Hall, a clerk for the Work Progress Administration (WPA), a U.S. governmental agency, and was an acting town manager for a short time. Finally she was an assessor, a job in which she continued until her death.

Olive, it can be said, was always there for her family, as well as for those who were around her and she worked without complaint. At home she loved cooking and holidays which were spent with her family.

Ruth Childs is a person who can talk of her mother as no one else can. Her mother, Mrs. Olive Sheldon, was the widow of Wilbur A. Sheldon, a Wilmington volunteer firefighter who was one of two Wilmington firefighters killed by bricks from a falling chimney during a fire on Lake Street on September 11, 1927.

The fire was just over the line in Tewksbury, on the left side of Lake Street as one drives toward Shawsheen Avenue. The site was about 200 yards beyond the present Fitz Terrace, which marked the then Fitzgerald home by Silver Lake.

This writer happened to be at that fire. He had been studying home work in the family kitchen in a home across from Miller Road, on Glen Road, when the fire alarm blew for a fire on Lake Street, half a mile away. It was easy to slip out the back door.

Several persons were working with a hose on the home when this writer arrived. A fair sized crowd was already present. The fire was an intense blaze in a small home. Three men were handling the fire hose. The fire was in Tewksbury.

One was Jerome O'Leary, who lived on Swain Road. Cold water from the fire hose had struck the chimney and the bricks collapsed. There was a distant thud on the ground.

The next sound was the voice of Jerome O'Leary. "Men Down!"

O'Leary was shouting about Russell Pratt and Wilbur A. Sheldon.

There was no doubt about their death, struck by the falling bricks from that chimney. The water from the hose was cold, and the bricks hot, and the chimney collapsed.

The Town and the Commonwealth donated money to the two families. Olive Sheldon was given a lifetime job by the town which she enjoyed. Everyone she met enjoyed her company.

Olive and her husband had constructed a home on Clark Street, half way between Church Street and Middlesex Avenue, on the "Wilmington Square" side. It is there still.

Olive grew up in a home on Lowell Street, across from the present Lucci's Market, but further east. Herbert C. Barrows was a near neighbor, on Woburn Street.

One of the things Olive enjoyed in Selectmen's meetings was to tell how Herb would drive off in the afternoon in a fine carriage, when he was courting Nina L. Kincaid who lived near Chestnut Street. To talk of Herb was always an event in Olive's life, and Herb was a man who always drove wagons, not carriages.

Herbert C. Barrows was a "special" man in Wilmington and any story about him was always enjoyed. He served in the Town Government about 60 years - Selectman, Finance Committee, etc. Herb received a special award from the Massachusetts Governor on the 50th anniversary of his attendance at Town Meeting - 50 years of perfect attendance!

He did not get one on the 60th anniversary. He had sold 70 acres of land to an incoming business (Avco) and the business of selling spoiled one visit to a Town Meeting!

To Olive Sheldon, Herb Barrows was a special hero, a person who always served others. Olive did not speak to Herb very often, nor of him, but when she did speak it was with a sense of admiration. Her remarks were always enjoyed by those who heard them.

Up to the time she passed away she continued to work in the Town Hall. Anything which would help she was always ready to perform.

She passed away suddenly on the 27th of January 1973. To the town officials, to the people of Wilmington who knew her, she was a heroine of Wilmington.

Tewksbury Hospital's DUIL Program:

A Second Offender's Last Chance

by FRANK AMATO
and CHARLOTTE COOPER

"This program is just part of the recovery process. Not all clients are ready for sobriety or are motivated for sobriety. [Our] program is in place for those who are interested, those who are committed, and those who are willing to work for 14 days. [Here] they can develop the major skills and courage needed to help them remain sober," said Michael Kennedy, Program Director of the DUIL (Driving Under the Influence of Liquor) at Tewksbury Hospital.

The program, now one of only two in the State, began at the Middlesex County Hospital on April 15, 1985. When the Hospital was sold, the program moved to Tewksbury and opened its doors on the Campus in March of this year. "People who come here are people who have been convicted by the courts of a second offense [for drunk driving] within 10 years," Kennedy said. The 2nd offense for drunk driving carries with it a mandatory prison sentence which can be waived, provided the client is willing to receive treatment. "The typical drunk driver isn't a law breaking inhabitant of the house of corrections. Many are employed and have parents and roots in the community. They may be little league coaches, school teachers; a drunk driver can be anyone. They just happen to have the disease of alcoholism," Kennedy said.

Sessions run in two week blocks, 24 hours each day, 365 days each year. Although there has been some resistance on the part of the courts to schedule client's treatments over the Christmas holiday, the program is still available. "We have a fourteen day residential program with a 70 bed capacity, and we place clients in six large wards. We admit approximately 1400 clients a year: we've admitted just under 17,000 clients in the 12 years we've been open. We have four semi-private rooms that are generally reserved for females. Right now, it's about 88% male," said Kennedy. The program receives more than 75% of its funding directly from the clients, with the remaining 25% obtained from the State. "There are provisions within the law that allow courts to declare a client indigent and the state picks up that tab. The cost for the commonwealth to operate this program is minimal," Kennedy added.

The program requires clients to attend classes and receive homework, view films, and go to individual counseling sessions during the day. At night they must attend Alcoholics Anonymous sessions and usually one MADD session during their visit. "We have 3 group counseling sessions each day [for the clients]. We have an extensive educational program where they learn about recovery, about alcohol and alcoholism, how it can affect them, and how it can affect their family," said Kennedy. Clients also attend educational classes on HIV and STD (sexually transmitted diseases).

"We deal with issues like problem solving, communication skills, anger management, and conflict resolution. All of which are issues [the clients] can plug into the recovery process. [Often], a person who has a difficult time solving conflicts finds themselves in situations that make it difficult to continue their sobriety. They get into binds and they don't have the necessary skills [to work it out]; it's easy for them to relapse back into drinking," said Kennedy. The program also addresses many issues surrounding substance abuse. Clients continue their treatment in an outpatient capacity after they gradate from this program, which usually in their own community and includes counseling sessions.

"There is a punishment aspect to this program, and there should be," Kennedy said. For most second offenders, this is their last chance. "You cannot use alcoholism as an excuse. You cannot say 'because of alcoholism, I'm not responsible for my drunk driving. Clearly they are. This program tries to reinforce that and I believe the courts try to reinforce that. Sometimes people on the outside don't understand what it means to be separated from your family. You don't have any visiting, you're told when to get up, you're told when to go to bed, you are told where to be at certain places, you share showers and commodes with other people, and they don't watch TV," said Kennedy.

The program is authorized for 26 full-time positions and the staff can number up to 35, including part time personnel. "Most of them have degrees and all of them are expected to become Certified Alcoholism Counselors within two years of being hired.

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is reasonably comfortable giving second offenders an opportunity for treatment," Kennedy said. However, the Commonwealth has its limits, and its exceptions. "Most third offenders should have gone to treatment twice. They should have gone to outpatient treatment which is approximately twenty weeks of lectures and group discussions, mandatory AA meetings and MADD meetings; which is what they get for their first offense. If that doesn't work they come to me and they are in here for 14 days. The law is clear that you should go to jail, but the reality is perhaps something different. I do believe most people do go to jail but there are clearly glaring exceptions," Kennedy said.

Although there has been no recent research conducted regarding the effectiveness of second offender programs, earlier studies showed a reduction in recidivism for those who attended treatment. "The people who received this treatment were less likely to drive drunk than people who were simply sent to the house of correction," Kennedy said.

"There are many things we could provide but don't, there are many classes we could teach but don't, because then we'd need a 21 or 28 day program. We do what we can in a very structured program. Whatever it takes to get sober, I'm in favor of," Kennedy said.

Summer Reading Club Birthday Party

WILMINGTON - True to the Summer Reading Club theme of Celebrate, the Children's Room concluded its summer program with a birthday party on Wednesday, August 6 at 2 p.m. Children ages five to 12 participated in a variety of party games. The traditional favorite Musical Chairs began this hour of fun. The Kipper Race involved a newspaper fish and a whacker (rolled up newspaper) to prod the kipper to the finish line. The kipper could not be touched, only propelled across the floor by air currents. A chance to outwit the witch was offered with In the Witch's Step as children try to touch an old hag's cauldron before she catches them moving from a frozen pose.

The results of the Summer Reading Club contests were announced. The winner of the Guess the Number of Jelly Beans was Jeremy Oreper. Hala Clough and her family won the drawing for tickets to the Big E. Since no birthday party is complete without presents, age appropriate gifts were distributed to all the party goers.

The Friends of the Library provided the refreshments for this festive gathering. A chocolate cake, decorated with streamers and confetti, grape punch and a favor of jelly beans were served to the guests.

On behalf of the Friends of the Library, Terri McDermott presented a bouquet of flowers to Sharon Ruetenik, children's librarian. She thanked Mrs. Ruetenik and the Children's Department staff for the enjoyable programs provided throughout the summer as part of the Summer Reading Club.

Over 600 children participated in the Summer Reading Club. They may pick up their Celebration certificates in the Children's Room. Congratulations.

Wilmington family says

Beauty pageants are for all ages

by BOB CARROLL

WILMINGTON - Picture a room filled with one-year-old kids running around, playing with each other, and waiting their turn to go on stage while beaming parents look on.

This controlled pandemonium is not a nursery school play. It's a beauty pageant!

Asked why she entered her daughter Kylee in a local beauty pageant at a mall in Billerica when Kylee was only six months old, Janice Winnett, formerly of Wilmington and now of Saugus said, "just for fun — just to see how she would do." It seems Winnett was more alert to beauty contests because her sister, 24 year old Karen Matulewicz of Wilmington, has competed in and won prizes in beauty contests.

Kylee, now one year old, participated in two other pageants, and won the beauty and photo category in the Baby U.S.A. pageant held in Framingham during the past July 4th weekend.

An agent from Dynasty International in Boston noticed Kylee at the pageant, and since then Dynasty and Kylee's mom and dad signed an agreement for Dynasty to represent Kylee for one year. Kylee's aunt and pageant prize winner Matulewicz noted that Dynasty works with major companies such as Cheerios.

All this beauty pageant stuff may amuse adults, but what about one-year-old Kylee?

Kylee's mom said Kylee, "loves it! "She added that Kylee likes to see and play with the other pageant babies, and seems to know when the camera is on her. Indeed, when the Town Crier photographer aimed a camera at Kylee, she often stopped what she was doing and looked at the camera. When the camera clicked, even though there was no flash, little Kylee would blink.

Kylee's mom recalled that by Kylee's second pageant, she was waving at the end of the runway and clapping for herself.

Kylee's dad, Brian Winnett, said it is "more fun watching the kids off stage than on. They all just have fun. They're all in one big room, so they get to run around like nuts and meet people." It seems babies running around together are fun, because one never knows what to expect.

Kylee's mom Karen said that most of the pageant parents are "really laid-back." Karen added that she purchased Kylee's pageant dress at a Bradlee's clearance sale. Kylee proceeded to win her pageant, even though one top competitor's family had spent lots of money on an outfit.

Regarding Kylee's future, her parents said they'll see what comes of the agreement with Dynasty. Beyond that, said Kylee's mom, they'll wait until Kylee is older and can select what she's interested in doing. It could be gymnastics — or soccer — or pageants.

Kylee's mom said pageants are fine so long as one does not put too much emphasis on winning. The emphasis belongs, she said, on having fun and making new friends.

Matulewicz, Kylee's aunt, who has participated in and won prizes in multiple pageants, observed that she enjoyed her first pageant most of all. It was the Natonal Teenager pageant. Matulewicz placed tenth statewide in that pagent. She cautioned that one should not expect to win at one's first competition.

Metulewicz recalled that she became interested in the pageant six years ago when was still in high school. She received something in the mail that indicated participants could win money for college, which interested her because she planned to go to college.

Since then, Matulewicz received her B.A. in early childhood education from Fitchburg State College. She presently teaches 30 hours per week in Lexington, and is looking for a full-time, classroom teacher position. Matulewicz said she likes working with kids, and now is a judge at baby pageants.

Matulewicz said she got sponsors for her first pageant including her dentist and borrowed a dress from a friend. Her aunt and uncle, who owned a sporting goods shop, also supported her under the shop's name. Fenway Painters of Wilmington also sponsored Matulewicz in her first pageant.

"The pageant was all teens and we got along," said Matulewicz, adding that the participants became friends and kept in touch for years as pen pals. "I saw the good side to pageants from the start," said Matulewicz, adding that pageants that put the emphasis on competition or were very glamorous would have turned her off.

In the teen pageant, recalled Matulewicz, she had to do formal modeling, was interviewed by five judges, and then had to give a speech on a topic such as "Why women love America." Matulewicz said, "I found it (the topic) pretty easy because I could get into opportunities for women and stuff pageants want to hear."

Matulewicz noted that boys could compete in pageants up to the age of six, after which too few boys were interested for pageants to bother. Parents of young boys who had stage presence might put their boys in a pageant as a preparation for auditioning for, say, Broadway parts, observed Matulewicz.

Matulewicz said people can develop misconceptions about pageants by watching TV pageants where only kids who have been competing for years participate and where the focus is on beauty and on thousand-dollar gowns.

Matulewicz said a lot of pageants have talent shows. She added that one youngster she had seen started out with a plain outfit and no special hairdo, but had a very angelic face and lots of talent. Now, at age four or five, the child has played in community theater productions, sings and dances, and does voice overs making recordings of foreign language tapes for kids. That youngster has won state and national pageants, observed Matulewicz.

Although two of her three sisters tried at least one pageant, Matulewicz said she was the only one who remained enthusiastic about pageants. "Pageants helped me a lot in college regarding meeting people," recalled Matulewicz. She added, pageants also helped her "to speak up in class" and to "sound intelligent" while speaking.

Wilmington Senior Topics

WILMINGTON - The August Commissioners meeting will be held next Tuesday. This will be a very important meeting. The guest speaker will be a representative from the Secretary of State's office, William Galvin. Many problems are being received at his office and the Attorney General's on scams against elderly persons. These scams can be from brokers selected by a senior citizen to invest their money; unscrupulous lawyers; stores that jack up prices on products, telling an older person they will reduce the price for them. Thinking they are receiving a big discount, they buy the item. Later they find out they had fallen for a scam.

Seniors are targeted every day by unscrupulous people who call to tell them they have won a large gift, but to receive it they will have to send a certain amount of money for insurance and shipping. No gift arrives.

How to avoid being the victim of a scam, will be explained at this meeting. Remember these scam artists are very good at their trade. The more one knows about them, the easier it will be for to handle them. The meeting starts at 1:30.

Handicapped bus

Through the generous donation of a check for $33,116, given by the Sons of Italy, seniors now have a new handicapped bus. It is equipped to handle two wheelchairs along with six other regular seats. It is hoped that with the two wheelchair lifts, more confined Wilmington seniors will be able to make medical appointments and enjoy the Senior Center days from Monday to Friday. It is requested, seniors call the Center at 657-7595 or 658-2258 the day before a ride is needed. The ride is free to seniors, but it should be known, with the large number of them requesting a ride, and transporting wheelchair seniors, it takes time. Seniors will be picked up as soon as the driver can get there. The same applies for the return trip. The driver will do the best he can, but there may be some waiting involved.

Therapeutic social

The Therapeutic social for August will be held at the Tewksbury/Wilmington Elks Friday evening, August 29. A chicken dinner with all the trimmings will be served at seven o'clock. Music will be provided for dinner and dancing. Signup for this social will be held Wednesday, August 20 beginning at 10:30 a.m. When signing up, a $3 non refundable stipend will be required to help defray the cost of the evening. Do not ask to sign up for another unless the senior is a spouse.

Chance books help programs

Every year at this time we sell chance books to supplement the budget. That is, the money we realize from the books will be used to cover two therapeutic socials, buy supplies and equipment for all the classes and programs. There are 24 money prizes on each ticket. Five chances in a book. Every book is $5. Each has a good chance of winning one of the prizes. Even if one does not win, so much is given to the center free of charge, a little bit can be given back in support of this raffle for just $5.

We have taken the unduplicated names of all the seniors served through the center and they add up to 1504. If each one takes one book, the proceeds will pay for supplies and equipment plus the two socials again this year. Drop by the center and purchase a book, or have one sent to you.

Where did I put my keys?

Whether young or old, everyone occasionally forgets things. When forgetfulness happens to older people, it sometimes triggers hidden fears about Alzheimer's Disease or installs feelings of helplessness and worries about the potential loss of independence.

The truth is, only a small proportion of people develop significant memory problems due to brain disease.

For a free brochure on understanding and improving memory, ask for a copy of "Now Where Did I Put My Keys?' by calling AARP Massachusetts at 617-720-5600 or write AARP, One Boston Place, Suite 1900, Boston, MA 02108.

Extended Day Care enters eighth year

WILMINGTON - The Extended Day Program functions under the auspices of the Wilmington School system. The program, which is developed for the elementary schools, is housed at the Wildwood Elementary schools (grades one through five) and the Boutwell School (kindergarten and Boutwell grade one). It is designed to meet the needs and schedules of working parents of children in grades K through five and runs in conjunction with the regular school calendar of 180 days. The morning schedule provides for breakfast, informal activities, and supervised leisure time from 6:45 to 8:45 a.m. five days a week. The afternoon program provides a snack and a more structured program from 3 to 6 p.m. each school day.

Staffing of the program is by qualified personnel. In addition to certified teachers, program aides and high school students are employed to assist the daily operations. The ratio of adult to child for the program is 1:10, thus assuring proper supervision.

The program comprises a range of activities, including outdoor play, arts and crafts, library time, cooking, movies, free play, computers, board games and puzzles. Children may also read a book, finish homework, or just enjoy quiet time under the supervision of our qualified staff. Additionally, program activities will include science enrichment, theater arts and Campfire Club for boys and girls.

The non-academic component of a child's day is crucial to his/her social and emotional development. Self confidence, self respect and self definition are encouraged. Making choices, developing responsibilities, learning to express his/her needs, and building friendships are important to a child's development.

Registration for the Extended Day Program will take place at the Wildwood Elementary School August 18, 19 and 20 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. At this time, one must complete the necessary paperwork to guarantee enrollment of a child. The registration fee and the first month's tuition will also be due at this time.

Questions may be directed by Program Coordinator, Bunny Kelley, at 694-6010.

College cost are on the rise!

Saving for your child's education — Start early!

Here's a look at monthly investments* needed when starting at various stages in a child's life:

Based on current average annual costs of $18,799 for a four-year private college and $7,733 for a four-year public college, and a 6% annual college inflation rate (source: The College Board, 1996). Investments assume an 8% average annual rate of return. Regular investment plans do not ensure a profit and do not protect against loss in a declining market. Not intended to represent the actual performance of any investment product and does not reflect any taxes. Fidelity Distributors Corporation.

News USA

(NU) - According to 1996 statistics from The College Board, the annual college inflation rate is at 6 percent. By the time today's newborns are ready to enter college in the year 2015, it will cost, on average, $214,635 for a four-year private college and $88,290 for a four-year public school. Although the costs are staggering, with a little planning these price tags need not cause sticker shock. The earlier parents start saving for their child's college education, the lower the regular monthly investments will be.

To assist parents in meeting these goals, many financial services institutions, such as Fidelity Investments, offer printed and online planning tools to help determine what future costs will be, and how to plan against them.

Recreation Feasibility Committee.

If the Conservation Commission feels it is a fair use of the land, it then moves forward to the Town Meeting for discussion of funding. Another possible obstacle is getting the state to change it from conservation land to recreational land.

Issues concerning funding, development and management of the course are still very much undecided. But the general feeling from the Selectmen is to have the town own and operate the course. "I would hope we would create a department with town employees to manage and staff the course," said Cain.

Golf may or may not be the only activity associated with this project. A walking and biking trail and a family recreation area are also some of the other ideas for the project. "I would hope this could be a multi-use area; I would like having a place where families could enjoy a day of outdoor recreation. We need to take a good look at this and see if it is fiscally feasible," said Michael McCoy, town selectman.

"A golf course would upgrade the town and provide an excellent source of revenue. We are looking at a half million dollars in possible profit for the town annually. We really would like to work with all the concerned parties and find a way to make this work for everyone," said Selectman James Rooney.

Does the risk outweigh the potential return? Will a golf course benefit all the town's citizens? Should the town operate a business designed to make a profit? These are just some of the concerns that need to be addressed before anyone tee's off.

The Greater Outdoors

Owning a fireman is a demanding responsibility

by Ed Larkin

If you wake up early in the morning in August and go for a walk, you can smell a touch of autumn in the air. That smell conjures up thought of cool morning bird hunts and big bucks in the thick Massachusetts woods. This is the time of year to sight in the new gun or practice up with old reliable.

If you are a gun owner or plan to buy a firearm in the near future, you must realize the demanding responsibilities of owning a gun. Safe, common sense handling of firearms provides the user with fun and enjoyment for years, if some basic principals are followed.

Although many of these guidelines seem fairly basic, it is necessary from time to time to sit down and review them. These insights are especially important when introducing someone new to firearms. Following these 120 guidelines should help ensure your shooting experience is a safe activity.

1. This is the cardinal rule of gun safety: Always keep the muzzle of any firearm pointed in a safe direction. Always assume a gun is loaded!

2. Never rely totally on your gun's mechanical "safety" devices. Always assume your gun can be fired at any time. Simply put, the word "safety" describes a gun's mechanical devices that are designed to place your gun in a safer status.

3. Whenever you first handle a firearm or hand it to someone else, make sure the gun is completely unloaded. Always check the chamber of the firearm and remove any magazines from the gun and keep the gun in safety mode.

4. Do not transport any firearm loaded.

5. Make sure your firearm is in good working order and the ammunition you use is the right caliber and gauge for the firearm. Inspect cartridges and shells to ensure they are clean and serviceable.

6. Always unload the chamber and magazine of any firearm before crossing a fence, climbing into a tree stand or negotiating other obstacles.

7. Make sure your firearm is unloaded before cleaning.

8. Educate and supervise firearms safety to all members of your family - especially children and non-shooters.

9. Wear eye and ear protection when shooting. This is difficult when hunting, but a good pair of sun glasses during the day and one ear plug lightly lounged in your shooting ear will give you some protection.

10. Make sure all firearms are in a safe and secure place that denies access to unwanted hands.

These are ten common sense rules to follow when handling a firearm. If you practice these guidelines your chance of getting injured with a firearm is very slight. If practiced,these rules will become habit and these are the right habits to have if you are a firearm owner. have a safe and productive season.

Lots of good news from the Divisions of Fisheries & Wildlife. The primitive firearms season is extended to six days. The season begins on December 15 and runs to December 20.

If you are a bow hunter, you are allowed to hunt during the primitive firearms season. You must buy a primitive firearms stamp and wear the required hunter's orange while hunting.

The board also removed a one deer/one day limit. Any hunter who has killed and checked a deer may continue hunting the same day for their second deer after obtaining a second deer permit.

These changes have been put in place because the state's deer population is at or above target levels in almost every Deer Management Zone. If you are considering hunting the Quabbin reservoir controlled hunt your application must be postmarked by August 15, or hand delivered to the Quabbin Visitor Center by 4 p.m. on that date. For more information, call the Quabbin Visitor Center at 413-323-7221.

The Hunter's Education course is being offered free of charge at the Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club starting September 4 at 7:30 p.m. and running Thursdays until October 16. Give George Rost a call at 851-9208 for more information.

Wilmington Little League has come a long way

Many Volunteers, 60 players and town common games in 1954

by JAMIE POTE

In the year 1954, Americans could buy a cup of coffee and a piece of pie for a quarter. They could buy a brand new baseball glove for six bucks and a brand new Buick Car for $2,500. During those days, under then President Dwight Eisenhower, the Korean War was coming to an end, Rock and Roll was just about introduced and Willie Mays was the star baseball player who all Americans adored. And for the town of Wilmington, 1954 was the second year in which Little League baseball was played. If one can remember, those days little league games were played on the Town Common.

Because of inflation, inventions and a totally different way of living, today one couldn't get a baseball glove for six bucks, rather they would pay ten times that. But, if it wasn't for many volunteers and 60 or so kids who loved to play the game of baseball, Wilmington Little League won't be able to celebrate its 45th Anniversary when they do so next spring.

Today, Wilmington Little League (Major Division of 10, 11 and 12 year olds) has eight teams and approximately 120 kids. The majority of those ballplayers have their own bats, batting gloves, cleats and wrist bands. In 1954, with half of the teams and half of the players, one was lucky to have a sweatshirt underneath their uniform, nevermind a batting glove.

"We would have to pass the hat during games to buy baseballs, the sponsors bought our uniforms," said Jack Cushing, who was a catcher/outfielder for the Yankees during the 1954 season.

The first season began in 1953. The Major League Division played its games Monday through Friday and the Minor Division played all day Saturday. All of the games were played at the Town Common. At the far end of the Common today on the Middlesex Ave. side right in front of the red house, used to lie home plate. The players were hitting towards where Wilmington High School is now. That field in 1953 had a snow fence, while there was no grass at all on the field, it was a dustball so to speak.

In 1954 things changed a little bit. Roy Hersom, this writer's grandfather, contributed a lot to the league. He built the concession stand at the Town Common. And before the 1954 season began, all of the players and coaches who were involved in little league at that time, helped build a solid bench like fence to replace the snowfence at Burt Sell's house, who was the president of the league at that time.

Said John Ritchie the Tigers coach, "I remember we would put the fence on a flatbed and it was stored at Roy's house down on Roberts Estates during the winter."

Also during the second season of Wilmington Little League there wasn't a fee to play, as the sponsors picked up the uniforms and as Cushing said the hat was passed to buy baseballs. Most of the players had rubber cleats and gloves with webbings, but not all, usually the ones who could afford them had the better ones. Back then, there were no such thing as a helmet, rather it was two "plastic airmuffs" that went over one's hat. There was no electric scoreboard, either, as the score was kept on a chalkboard that stood over the center field fence.

There were four teams in 1954: Weiberg's Tigers; Chisholm's Indians; Gildart's Yankees; and Cain's Red Sox. All of the teams had 15 players on it who were either 10, 11 or 12 years old. Back then, players could be brought up during the middle of the season from the minor leagues, depending on if they were good enough to play at the Major League level. The Tigers were the best team that year, as the Yankees were the champions in 1953. Ritchie was the head coach for the Tigers, while, Bob Baker was the coach of the Indians, Joe Gilligan and Cliff Watters were the coaches of the Red Sox and Bucky Backman and Bob Peters were at the helm of the Yankees.

The Tigers were the best team and according to Ritchie they had a five or six game winning streak to overcome the Yankees. The Tigers were loaded with pitchers. Tony DelTorto, the biggest 12-year old in the league, and John "JohnnyBoy" McCabe were two of the top pitchers in the league during that time. However, the league was loaded with talented ball players.

"There was some great talent back then," said Cushing. "That was when players like Ricky Froton and [a year later] Jeff Williamson began their days and many talented players followed."

Froton and Williamson, who were both excellent little league pitchers and then high school pitchers, went on to professional careers in the minor leagues. Froton pitched two plus seasons with the Boston Red Sox Single A affiliate team in the New York Penn League in the early 60's before injuring his pitching arm. Williamson, on the other hand, made it as far as Double A in the Baltimore Orioles chain, also in the early 60's.

Froton recalled one memory he had during his Wilmington days, "I remember I was pitching against the Tigers. I struck out all 18 batters who faced me, I walked only one and didn't give up a hit. I walked Kevin Fields. He then stole second, stole third and scored on a wild pitch. And we lost 1-0."

Besides Froton, DelTorto and McCabe as the front line pitchers, there were many other outstanding ball players. Eddie Casey of the Red Sox was the home run hitter, while, players like Jimmy Malzar, Ricky DiMilo, Dick Hersom (this writer's uncle), Joe Beaton and current Wilmington High School Principal Eddie Woods all could hit, run and throw with the best of them.

"In 1960, I was on the first Wilmington High School championship baseball team," said Bob Gage, who was a member of the Yankees, but wasn't in the team picture and now has been a coach in Wilmington Little League for almost twenty years. "And a lot of those guys on that team were great players in little league [during the 1954 season]. Guys like Froton, Melzar, Dimilo, Woods, Casey and Beaton were all excellent ball players. Back then, none of the other high schools teams ever won. The football team wasn't winning and either was the basketball team or any others. We were the first team, really who ever won anything."

A lot has changed since those early days. There was no registration fee back then, nowadays it about $60 per child to play a summer of baseball (in Tewksbury its $100 per child). No longer are the kids playing their games at the Town Common, nowadays the games have been switched over to Rotary Park which is across the street of the Police Station. Nowadays its the parents who buy the uniforms and the whole nine yards, while, the sponsors get their names on the back of the shirts and their names in the newspapers for no apparent reason. Back then it was wooden bats on a dusty field (in which the high school football team practiced on) with small gloves, rubber cleats, plastic airmuffs and 60 or so kids who would do anything to play the game. Today, its aluminum bats on a beautiful grass/stonedust field with the best glove, the best cleats, the best batting gloves, the best bats and full protective helmets. Most importantly, back then, the little league ballplayers played because of their love for the game, today that is a big question.

However, even though a lot of things have changed during the 44 years of Wilmington Little League, a lot has stayed the same. Still, there are many talented ball players. Yesterday was the Frotons and Caseys and today is the Rappolis and Sinopolis -- all four of them have the distinction of being four flamethrowers during their Major League tenure. Today a lot more people are involved be it ball players, coaches, parents and other volunteers.

And all of that means that todays 120 or so kids in just the major division, would not being having fun, would not being playing baseball, had it not been for all of those involved with bringing Little League to the town of Wilmington.

These three pictures along with the one on the front paage of news are the four teams who made up the second season of Wilmington Little League in 1954. Three of the Yankees players could not be identified as well as three Tigers and one Red Sox. If anyone has knowledge of who the players are or if they have any other knowledge of the 1954 season they are urged to contact Jamie Pote here at the Town Crier. Anyway, the Yankees are: (bottom row left to right) Ricky DiMilo, Bobby Kurr, ?, Jack Cushing, Dick Hersom, ?, Dave Fuller and Ralph Zwicker. Top row: Coach Bucky Backman, Warren Allen, ?, Mike Karoti, Al Penny, Bill Hunneyfeld, Billy Ethier and Coach Bob Peters. (Photo courtesy of Mark Peters).

Pote's AFC picks

Can Patriots repeat last year's performance?

by JAMIE POTE

Even though it is a couple of weeks early, both Steve Repsys and I decided it was time to do the annual NFL Football Preview.

Last year, my predictions weren't bad as I said the Packers would win it all and the Pats would be 10-6 like they were. Hopefully this year, it will be the Pats who win the Super Bowl and its the Packers who go 10-6.

Anyway, this time I decided to do things a little different. I'm going to write about the AFC teams, while, Steve will give his predictions for the NFC teams (see next page). At the end of our respective outlooks, both of us will predict our playoff teams and our superbowl winner.

AFC East

1). New England Patriots (11-5)
2). Miami Dolphins (9-7)
3). Indianapolis Colts (8-8)
4). New York Jets (7-9)
5). Buffalo Bills (6-10)

New England Patriots

We all got wrapped up into everything about the Patriots, the Big Tuna, Drew and "She." And it was terrific as you all know. We all knew that the Pats couldn't and really wouldn't beat the Packers even on the Packers worse day and the Pats best day, but none of us cared. We only cared that we were there.

Now a few months later a lot of things have changed. No more Big Tuna, as Bill Parcells has moved on to New York. No more classic press conferences and no more exciting shouting matches on the sidelines. Now we have Pete Carroll and I think he is going to do a terrific job, I really do.

What last year's success did though, was set a tone. I think last year is the start of a long string of years in which this team could be and might be a dominating team, regardless if and when they win the Super Bowl. I don't think last year was a fluke, even though Drew might not be the best quarterback in the league (and maybe that be the biggest difference between them ever beating the Packers), but this team has too many weapons just to shut down Drew and to not allow them at least the Division Championship again.

One of the biggest reasons why I think the Pats will have another string season is there depth. Drew has so many weapons to turn to. Throwing wise, Terry Glenn was awesome last year and much like Nomar Garciaparra of the Red Sox, I think both of them control their own destinies and who knows just how great they just might be. Besides Glenn, Drew can go deep to Shawn Jefferson or Ben Coates or for shorter distances how about Keith Byars, Sam Gash, Vincent Brisby or Curtis Martin? Now that is arguably the best offensive group in football.

Speaking of Martin, expect him to do a lot more this year, both carrying the ball and catching a few for shorter yards. I don't think Dave Meggett will be here too much longer. Maybe a kid like Mario Grier will make Meggett expendable, who knows?

We all know that the offense should be great and should have no problems putting up numbers, unless of course a drastic injury, but will the defense repeat? The defensive line does need some more help, but the linebackers and secondary are solid to say the least.

I really believe that the Pats can get back to the Super Bowl again. A lot of that will depend on Carroll and how is perceived and a lot of has to do with the offensive line which is not that strong. That, along with the defensive line are the two major questions of whether or not this team is a fluke or a real contender.

Miami Dolphins

One minute the Dophins look like the Dolphins of old and the next minute they look like a Pop Warner team. It seems as if the Dolphins might have been going down hill for a minute there, but the team has established a few things since under the roof of Jimmy Johnson and they actually appear as if they are on there way up.

If Dan Marino is healthy for the entire season, if their offensive line can give him some time to throw the ball, if Karim Abdul-Jabbar doesn't have the sophomore jinx, then perhaps the Dolphins will get back to its winning ways with some several big free agent additions and some more young blood.

Injuries have already hurt the Dolphins and they haven't even played a game yet this season. This division is the weakest out of the AFC and Johnson, Marino and Abdul-Jabbar should be enough to get this team to at least a .500 record.

Indianapolis Colts

You would think that a team that has a lot of talent like the Colts do, would go out in the off-season and address there biggest weakness: the offensive line. They didn't and thats why this team will forever be a .500 team.

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh actually is not a bad player, he just doesn't get any kind of protection at all. Marshall Faulk and Zack Crockett are a terrific 1-2 punch in the backfield, while, Marvin Harrison, Sean Dawkins and Ken Dilger is not a bad threesome of receivers to turn to. Harrison, for the record, will have a huge season!

Patriots quarterback Drew Bledsoe in action.

Defensively they need a little help, but doesn't every team?

New York Jets

Believe me, the Jets are going to be a good team and probably a great team in a short time. If this team stays healthy, they will win their share of games and they will give a lot of teams a lot of havoc.

Yes, Bill Parcells will make a huge difference. He won't make a big difference on Neil O'Donnell for example, but players like Adrian Murrell, Keyshawn Johnson, Kyle Brady and Aaron Glenn he should do wonders for.

With everything Parcells has accomplished in the past, it wouldn't surprise me if Parcells takes this team to the playoffs. If that happens under the all-time best coach ever to take the sidelines, it would probably be a player like Glenn Foley leading the way.

AFC Central

1). Cincinnati Bengals (9-7)
2). Jacksonville Jaguars (7-9)
3). Tennessee Oilers (7-9)
4). Pittsburgh Steelers (6-10)
5). Baltimore Ravens (4-12)

Cincinnati Bengals

For some reason, I always predict that the Bengals and the Raiders will be teams to be reckon with, yet they never fulfill expectations. Maybe this year.

This team has just about everything...except many of the players are young guns with a ton of potential. They also lack a few guns period on defense. Offensive wise, Jeff Blake is an emerging star as the quarterback, with two exceptional receivers in Carl Pickens and Darnay Scott, not to mention running back Ki-Jana Carter, who should have a monster season.

This will be a team in which either everything comes together or everything falters.

Jacksonville Jaguars

I think I might be the only person who is not completely sold on Mark Brunell. Sure he has a great arm, and strong, quick legs. But, last season he tossed 19 td's and 20 interceptions which was good for 4,367 yards on 557 pass attempts. In comparison, Bledsoe tossed 27 td's and he was intercepted 15 times, while tossing 4,086 yards on 623 attempts.

I'm only stating the stats between these two quarterbacks because (probably one of the only times I ever will agree with him) I heard Eddie Andelman of WEEI Radio arguing with a caller the other day of who was better. True, Brunell's stats look better because he threw for 281 more yards than Bledsoe on 66 less attempts which is pretty impressive. But look at the interceptions, Brunnell had one more than he had touchdowns. Not to mention he had five more than Bledsoe as well as eight less touchdowns in 66 more attempts. That also means that Brunnell averages an interception every 28 attempts, while Bledsoe averages one every 42 attempts. On the other hand, Brunnell has the edge because he runs very well and he hasn't come close to reaching his potential yet, but really has Bledsoe?

All of these thought and stats don't mean a thing now, because Brunnell is out for the season with a knee injury. Before the injury happened, I had Jacksonville ahead of the Bengals at 10-6, now without him, they will be lucky to win seven games.

Tennessee Oilers

No matter what city, what head coach or what quarterback they have, this team will always be boring and mediocre. They do have some signs of hope with Eddie George and Chris Sanders, but besides that your guess is as good as mine of naming another player.

Pittsburgh Steelers

Perhaps head coach Bill Cower should do more commercials where his players toss the water cooler on over (okay a television set) because those days and coolers for that matter are now numbered. This team is on the downside, unless Cower pulls off a few miracles.

Baltimore Ravens

I'll never give owner Art Modell more than five wins. Thankfully, I'm not from Cleveland. Wouldn't it be great if they never win a game this season and hardly any luxury boxes were sold? Actually, why would you want to pay to see Vinny Testerverde or any of these other no names?

AFC West

1). Denver Broncos (11-5)
2). Oakland Raiders (10-6)
3). Kansas City Chiefs (9-7)
4). Seattle Seahawks (9-7)
5). San Diego Chargers (6-10)

Denver Broncos

This division really scares me because not only can the Broncos give the Pats a lot of trouble but so could Oakland and KC.

We all know John Elway won't quit until he gets that ring, and for him he is improving with age. He has a ton of weapons with Terrell Davis as arguably one of the best backs in football and Shannon Sharpe as the second best tight end in football as well.

Defensively the Broncos look very sound. The difference with this team is whether or not they all want it bad enough, not just Elway.

Oakland Raiders

The additions of Jeff George and Desmond Howard could either make this team a super bowl contender or another Raider team with a lot of talent and a handful of victories to show for it. Look for both of them to have big seasons.

The Raiders are filled with quick backs such as Napolean Kaufman, Harvey Williams and Tim Brown. As well as that trio, they add Howard to the receiving team along with James Jett and Rickey Dudley and that is a pretty good make-up of what could be an explosive offense.

Defensively, the Raiders look solid with their secondary being their biggest weakness.

Kansas City Chiefs

The "Chefs" as they should be called (because of the very funny commercial) added their biggest need a passer in Elvis Grbac and perhaps he can push them over the edge.

Greg Hill and Marcus Allen are okay in the backfield, as they could use some more depth. Lake Dawson and Tamarick Vanover are two solid receivers, but they lack the big playmaker to get them over that edge. Defensively, they are always very good and always pulling out star after star and that shouldn't stop this season.

Seattle Seahawks

If this team was in the East with the Pats, I would predict them ahead of the Dolphins. A lot of their success depends on Warren Moon, but it seems Wil Cordero's twin brother always comes up big wherever he plays.

Besides Moon, the Hawks desperately need back Chris Warren to get back to his old form, while, they need Joey Galloway and Brian Blades to continue to put up impressive numbers.

San Diego Chargers

Did I ever tell you that Stan Humphries is the most overrated quarterback in football? If I hadn't, I have now. Hang it up, "Stan the Man."

Pote's Predictions

In the AFC, I like the Patriots, Bengals and Broncos to win their respective divisions. I like the Dolphins, Raiders and Chiefs as the three playoff teams. Jacksonville would have been there but the injury to Brunnell cancels that thought.

In the NFC, I like Washington, Green Bay and San Francisco as the three division winners, with, Philadelphia, Tampa Bay and Detroit getting playoff nods. Carolina would be there but the injury to quarterback Kerry Collins cancels that, and I dispise the Cowboys not only do I think they are very overrated, but they lost too many weapons to even make it to the playoffs.

I think the Patriots have too many weapons not to get out of the AFC East to go to the Super Bowl. If they stay injury free, no matter who the coach is, there are too may good players on this team not to get there again. Player against player, no one in the AFC matches up against the Pats. So I see them going to the SuperBowl again against the Packers, because talent wise no one should beat them either. Packers over the Pats, 31-17.

Dallas to go to Super Bowl?

NFC East

1). Dallas
2). Philadelphia
3). Washington
4). Arizona
5). New York

Dallas Cowboys

Troy Aikman. Emmit Smith. Michael Irvin. This outstanding offensive trio has won three Super Bowls together. Though they're getting up their in age, they have the experience and desire to succeed no matter what the scenario is. They're all work horses who know how to win and that rubs off on their teammates.

Look out for Troy Aikman this year. He has the free agent wide receiver Anthony Miller added to his arsenal. Remember Aikman loves to have the tight ends be a big part of the offense so keep a close eye on David LaFleur, the tight end from Louisana State, who Aikaman coveted.

On defense, the 'Boys are a bit thin with Leon Lett serving a 13 game suspension. However they have a great secondary with Deion Sanders, Kevin Smith and Darren Woodson.

Predicted record 11-5

Philadelphia Eagles

Whoever is at the helm, be it Ty Detmer or Rodney Peete, will have plenty of ammunition at their disposal. Irving Fryar and Chris T. Jones will be the playmakers at wideouts. If running back Ricky Watters can put the team before himself, he will have a monster year to improve on his 13 touchdowns from last year.

Philly had a schrizophrenic defense last year. A key acquisiton to solve their defensive dielemma was the signing of speedy outside linebacker Darrin Smith. This could be a big year for Mike Mamula at end.

The Eagles are a team on the upswing. If all the pieces fall into place they could be a team to be reckoned with.

Predicted finish 10-6

Washington Redskins

In Gus they trust. The 'Skins have locked quarterback Gus Ferotte to a four year $18 million contract. Without having to look over shoulder, now that Shuler is in New Orleans, Ferotte should have a monster season. He's got plenty of talented weapons to take advantage of with wide recievers Michael Westbrook and Alvin Harper. Add productive running back Terry Allen, who led the league in touchdowns last year, and you have an offensive that can light up the scorebaord.

Last year Washington was ranked second from the bottom on defense and gave up the most running yards. The Redskins signed a few cornerbacks to help out a defense that collapsed in the second half of the season.

The Redskins offense will keep them in the game but their defense is still extremely questionable.

Predicted finish 9-7.

Arizona Cardinals

Take this to the bank-- local hero Jake Plummer will take over the quarterback position from Kent Graham before Thanksgiving. This is a team that is going to struggle to put points on the board.

On defense, Arizona has some talent, such as Simeon Rice (12.5 sacks in his rookie year) and Eric Swann at tackle.

Expect the usual style of boring Arizina football to rear its ugly head again. They'll be lucky to score in double digits in half their games.

Predicted finish 4-12

New York Giants

How far can a team go with Dave Brown at qurterback? The answer is not very far. It's tough to score points when the wide recieivers are average at best. This is a team lacking offensive firepower as the only star they have is the marginal Tyrone Wheatley at running back.

The defense is the Giants only saving grace. They don't have anybody spectacular at defense but do have a handful of decent players to make the team competitive.

The Giants are one of the few teams in the NFL to fail to sign any free agents. When the talent level isn't that good to start with, any signing would have been an improvement. This is a team destined to struggle all year. It will be painful to watch this team.

Predicted finish 4-12.

NFC Central

1). Green Bay
2). Tampa Bay
3). Detroit
4). Minnesota
5). Chicago

Green Bay Packers

What's scary about Brett Favre is that he hasn't hit his prime yet, as he turns 28 in October. He's a quarterback's quarterback with a cannon for an arm and can make things happen out of nothing. If he can stay healthy there's no reason he can't be a three time MVP.

Losing Edgar Bennett for the season greatly hurt the team but the slack will be made up nicely by Dorsey Levens.

Only one starter from last year's defense is not returning, Sean Jones who opted for the broadcasting booth. The Minister of Defense. Reggie White is still a terror to be reckoned with, as most teams choose to double team him. This is the stingiest defense in the league and that doesn't look to change again this season.

The Pack is loaded with talent on both sides of the ball. The biggest loss was not Desomond Howard but kicker Chris Jacke. The frozen tundra at Lamboeau Field can get pretty slippery and that can put a lot of pressure on a rookie kicker.

Predicted finish 13-3.

Tampa Bay Bucs

This is a team ready to come out of their doldrums and end their streak of 14 straight losing seasons. Quarterback Trent Dilfer looks like he's prepared to step it up a notch. They solidified their offense drafting running back Warrick Dunn and receiver Reidel Anthony. Add into the mix fullback Mike Alstott (who had the most receptions last year as a running back), wideout Horace Copeland (who missed last season due to a knee injury) and back Erict Rhett (who held out for half of last season) and you have a nucleus for the next millenium.

Bad news for the Bucs is that defensive tackle Warren Sapp might miss the season due to a drug suspenison. Defensively on the left side, Tampa Bay is pretty solid. However on the right side, there are a lot of questions.

Tampa Bay has a great coach in Tony Dungy. They finished strong last season winning five out of their last seven games. Look for them to build upon that momentum and surprise a lot of teams.

Predicted finish 10-6.

Detroit Lions

Barry Sanders is a happy camper, as he agreed to a five-year contract. Sanders is one of the top backs in the NFL and will get his 100 yards per game. Brett Perriman is gone but Herman Moore had an amazing 108 receptions last year to lead the Lion's air attack. Last season quarterback Scott Mitchell threw as many touchdowns as interceptions. If the Lions want to get back in the playoffs, that ratio will have to improve dramatically.

The Lions greatly improved themselves in the offseason by dumping underachiever Wayne Fontes and bringing in Coach Bobby Ross to add the discipline the Lions seemed to be lacking.

With the offensive combination of Sanders and Perriman, Detroit won't have a problem scoring. Detroit rarely loses at home and if their defense can hold up, Detroit could find themselves in the playoffs again.

Predicted record 9-7

Minnesota Vikings

Brad Johnson starts the season as quarterback but if he flounders at all, Randall Cunningham will be ready to relieve him. On the ground, the Vikes have the tandem of Robert Smith and LeRoy Hoard. Coupled with the air attack of wide recievers Cris Carter and Jake Reed, Minnesota is in position to be an offensive threat.

Coach Dennis Green is most noted for his defense. However last year Minnesota ranked 15th in defense. To improve upon their defense, Minnesota made a good selection in pass rushing specialist Dwayne Rudd.

The biggest question for this team is whether Johnson can play solidly for the whole season. The Vikings are a team with talent but have never made it over the hump.

Predicted finish 9-7.

Chicago Bears

Chicago has rolled the dice asking Rick Mirer to take over the offense, as he has struggled in his four years in the NFL. If he wanes, the capable Erik Kramer will be ready to step in. Rashaan Salaam, after missing last year, will be poised to rush for over 1,000 yards like he did in his rookie season of 1995.

The team is led on defense by linebacker Bryan Cox, a noted hothead. The Bears will need him to concentrate on the field, if they want to improve their defense.

Chicago does not have the weapons to compete with the big boys in the league with their limited offense and defense.

Predicted finish 6-10.

NFC WEST

1). Carolina
2). San Francisco
3). St. Louis
4). New Orleans
5). Atlanta

Carolina Panthers

Kerry Collins, is the epitome of the new breed of quarterback in the NFL. He's fast, can scramble and has a rocket for an arm. With the running combination of Anthony Johnson and Tim Biakabutuka, they will have a powerful running attack.

On defense last year, Carolina was impressive producing 60 sacks, and

PRUNING YOUR MORTGAGE

Cost cutting has become something of an art form for those who are serious about saving money. One potential area for saving that most people fail to consider is their mortgage. You can shave years off your mortgage and save thousands of dollars in interest by adding a little extra to your mortgage payment each month.

Suppose you took out a 30-year mortgage for $125,000 at 8% interest with monthly payments of $917. You total payments over the life of the loan will come to $330,194, and $205,194 of that will be interest. If you pay just $100 extra each month, your total loan payments will be $265,050. You will save $65,144 in interest and retire your mortgage in 19 years!

Is it in your best interest to pay off your mortgage early? It depends. Your decision should be based on your budget, your long-range plans (how long you plan to live in your home), and your income bracket. Consult your tax accountant to find out if an early payoff is an option for you.

intercepted 22 passes.

Carolina has a great blend of youth, experience and coaching. They are a team whose success is no accident.

Predicted finish 12-4.

San Francisco 49'ers

This is a team that is on a downward spiral. Questions remain on the health of Steve Young. The ageless Jerry Rice is still in tremendous shape but draws so much attention that his effectiveness as the main playmaker has been diminished. The team hopes the addition the signing of running back Garrison Hearst will solve their meager running game.

The team has a great defense but is aging. They need to concentrate more as mental lapses cost them two games last year.

With a rookie head coach and a team way past its prime, San Fran will be in for some tough times.

Predicted finish 9-7

St. Louis Rams

With the addition of Orlando Pace, Lawrence Phillips should have some big time holes to run through. Quarterback Tony Banks needs to take better care of the football has he fumbled 21 times last year.

St. Louis is a very young team and with a coach whose been out for fourteen years, this team is destinied to struggle.

Predicted finish 6-10

New Orleans Saints

If it wasn't for Mike Ditka , this team would really be in the cellar. They have Heath Shuler at quarterback who has not yet come up to expectations.

Ditka will make players actually want to come to play in New Orleans for a change. But he has a lot of rebuilding to do and it's going to take a lot of time.

Predicted finish 5-11.

Atlanta Falcons

Coach Dan Reeves' inherits a team with only two problems-- offense and defense. The only bright spot on this team is kicker Morten Andersen. Reeves will need a great deal of paitence to make this team turn the corner.

Predicted finish 4-12.

Repsys Predictions:

In the NFC, I like Dallas, Green Bay and Carolina as the three division winners and Tampa Bay, Washington and San Francisco as the three wildcard teams.

In the AFC, I like the Pats, Pittsburgh and Denver as the three divisional winners and Miami, Cincinnati and Kansas City as the three wild card teams.

Look for Dallas to come out of the NFC as Green Bays hits an emotional block and can't get over Dallas. In the AFC, look for the Pats to get back in the SuperBowl as Drew Bledsoe is on a mission to prove it wasn't Bill Parcells who got him there the first time. Dallas beats the Pats, 35-24.

Under 12A girls soccer

State Champions!

WILMINGTON - The Wilmington girls under 12A soccer team recently competed in the Middlesex League Commissioners cup and came away with the championship with a hard fought 1-0 victory over first place Burlington.

In their first game, Wilmington played Lowell and handled the third place team with little trouble. In the second game against Burlington it was winner take all for the championship. The first half of the game was a defensive battle with Wilmington outstanding defensive backfield of Holly Flynn, Mary Sullivan, Stacy Comer, Micheala Rufo and goalie Liz Coughlin frustrating the Burlington offense time after time.

In the second half Wilmington go the break it needed as Burlington cleared a loose ball off the line to set up a Danielle Spry corner kick. Crossing the ball into the center of the net Danielle's corner kick confused the Burlington defense just enough for Ashley Steenbruggen to pounce on loose the ball and fire it home for the victory.

Standout performances during the Commissioner Cup playoffs were turned in by midfielders Leah DeMaggio and Michele Sousa, forwards Lauren MacDonald and Jen Leone and defensive backs Kristen Burns, Ashley Morgado and Kerri Gillespie in net. Making key contributions during the season as well as the playoffs were forwards Kristin Duggan, Katie Hallas, Vanessa Marsh and Courtney Hassey.

The Commissioners Cup victory capped off a great season for the girls who finished with a 10-1-1 record and coaches Ray Robinson and Diane DeMaggio would like to thank all the girls for a great year.

Glen Road playground ends festivities

The Glen Road Playground Program began its final full week of playground on Monday by making friendship bracelets. Children created bracelets using string from all colors of the rainbow. The results were magnificent.

Despite the rain on Tuesday the rest of the week was filled with lots of sunshine. On Wednesday, the playgrounders traveled to Portsmouth, N.H. and enjoyed a day of fun at Water Country.

Thursday marked the Playground's Annual Police Beach Day at Silver Lake. Playgrounders from both the Glen Road and Woburn Street camps as well as Wilmington residents spent the day playing beach volleyball, making sand sculptures, listening to music, participating in swimming events, and enjoying the giant cookout.

A warm thank you goes to the Wilmington Police Department for organizing the cookout and to Frank Marchesi for supplying the music.

Friday was full of excitement for the playgrounders with both the talent show and a kickball tournament. All the entries were very talented, but the crowd pleasers were definitely Jimmy Good and his impressions of Mo Vaughn, Cosette Hirschfeld and her amazing tongue, and the Fabulous Taping Trio.

Congratulations to "Playgrounders of the Week," Kaitlyn Jordan and John Bavota and "Volunteers of the Week," Lindsay Bruno and Scott Aldridge.

Playgrounds make friendship bracelets

The Woburn Street Summer Playground Program has completed its last full week of activities.

On Monday, August 4, playgrounders had fun making friendship bracelets. We also made beaded key chains and held our sidewalk chalk display which was rescheduled from last week.

Unfortunately, playground was canceled Tuesday due to the rain. However, the talent show was rescheduled for Friday. On Wednesday, August 6, both the Woburn Street and Glen Road Playgrounds combined for a field trip to Water Country. Everyone enjoyed a fun filled day of waterslides and sun.

On Thursday, both playgrounds combined once again for some more water and sun - this time for sculpture contests, dj, dancing and a cookout.

A huge thank you goes out to the Wilmington Police Department for supplying the food, Frank Marchesi for the rockin' tunes, and all the lifeguards for ensuring everyone's safety.

On Friday, August 8, we held our kickball tournament and our talent show. All of our acts were very entertaining including David DiGuardia and his talking dinosaur; Josh and Devin Giroux singing "Amazing Grace;" our Spice Girls: Tara Osgood, Sandra Kelly, Lauren McGonagle, Jessie Lecesse and Stefany Quinton; Caroline Lamson jumping rope; Jen Fitzgerald dancing and Danny Murphy showing his "muscles." Look out Hollywood, here they come!

Congratulations to "Playgrounders of the Week," Lauren McGonagle and Joshua Giroux and "Volunteer of the Week," Liz Lamson.

Tiny Tots program over

The Wilmington Recreation Department's Tiny Tots/Kids' Club program has concluded a very successful summer. A "Family Night" special one-man show featuring the talented Keith Johnson capped off a summer that featured dance, karate, animal and science presentations along with daily arts and crafts activities, games, sports, msuc and water play. The time flew by all too quickly, but we hope to see many return next year for more summer time fun.

We also wish to take this opportunity to thank the many wonderful teenage volunteers who generously gave their time during these past six weeks. The children enjoyed being with them and the staff greatly appreciates their efforts in enabling us to successfully run this summer program.

Travel team takes second

TEWKSBURY - The (third in the state) Tewksbury girls 10 and under travel team finished in second place in the Taunton Open held during the weekend of July 25.

The team played seven games in two days, finishing with a record of 5-2. The highlight of the tournament was a dramatic 2-1 win over Mass powerhouse Somerset. The team not only needed to win the game, but also due to tie breaker rules they could allow only one one against.

For a team in existence for less than two years, the Tewksbury team has proven that it can play with and beat any team in the state. They have played remarkable softball all summer.

Wilmington Adult Softball

Brother's Pizza, Stelio's continue to fight for top spot

by JAMIE POTE

The last few weeks of the Wilmington Adult Softball season is winding down with the playoffs to begin this Monday. Here are some of the results from the past month from the Over 35 League as the slow pitch league results will be in next week's edition. The standings for all three leagues are also included.

Over 35 League

Lakeside	18
Charlies Auto Body	6

Lakeside scored ten runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to break a two-run game. Paul Fullerton went deep and Peter Brown and Steve Gilardi contributed with three hits each.

Kevin French and Ronnie Barber had two hits each in the losing effort.

Rocco's	15
Peterson Club	2

It was all Rocco's as they scored eight runs in the first inning to set the tone. Larry Cushing led the offensive attack with a home run and Chuck Duggan, Bobby Aprile, Rich Rappoli and Bill Wallace all had two hits each.

Bobby Aprile got the win on the mound as he limited PC to just five hits.

Stelio's	14
Lions Club	8

Stelio's continues to be the surprise team as they scored seven runs in the bottom of the fifth to win the game outright. Roy Anderson, John Engdahl and Herbie Mason brought the big sticks with them as they combined to go 10-for-10 with Mason going deep.

Bob Crosby, Jim Cleary, Steve Gustis and Wayne Vokey all had three hits in the losing cause.

E.C. Whitney	17
Brothers Pizza	11

Artie Bibeau, Bobby Butters and Roy Bromander all went deep, while, Steve Brander and Rick McCully both went 4-for-4 for E.C. Whitney in the win.

Dave Woods had three hits in the loss.

Peterson Club	18
Charlies Auto Body	4

It was all PC as Ray Parker, Jim Crowley and George Pratt led the way with the bats as they combined for eleven hits in the win.

Pratt limited Charlies to just eight hits over five innings.

Lions Club	2

BP bashed out 24 hits as they nearly beat the LC by three touchdowns in this five inning mercy run rule game. David Woods and Artie Sughrue combined for seven hits as Tommy Woods notched another victory on the mound. The Lions Club only had five hits off Woods.

Stelio's	8
E.C. Whitney	1

Chris Hinxman was nearly masterful on the mound as he limited the highly touted EC offense to just one run on six hits through seven innings. Mark Blaisdell was the lone batter to have a multiple hit game with two for EC.

As for the winning club, Dan Bamberg had a big triple, while, Al Porterfield and Mike Griffin also contributed with two hits each, with the latter going yard work.

Rocco's	18
Lakeside	10

Jimmy Rappoli and Jimmy Litwinski paced the Rocco's offense with three hits each as Rocco's was very fortunate as the Lakeside defense was not up to par on that night.

Bobby Hogg and Joe Carvalho had two hits each in the losing effort.

Stelio's	14
Charlies Auto Body	1

Stelio's chipped away with multiple runs in four of the six innings to beat CAB in a Mercy Rule game of 14-1. Ken Feindel and Al Porterfield had three hits each in the win. Chris Hinxman got the win on the hill as he gave up just five hits.

Lions Club	10
Charlies Auto Body	9

In one of the better games of the season, the Lions Club were able to pull out the win with a run in the top of the seventh thanks to a rbi single by Bob Crosby. Wayne Vokey also contributed with three hits.

John Pellerin had two hits in the loss as CAB left the tying run on first base with one out in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Museums lead activities list

By DOUG WOOD-BOYLE

Oh no! Its the first day of your vacation and its raining or perhaps it is just to hot and muggy to even go too the beach.

The kids are getting edgy and your wondering what to do besides taking them to a movie.

Never fear. You live in the Greater Boston area and the world of entertainment (and learning) is wide open to you.

A good way to combine entertainment and learning together is to take in one of many local museums. What you may find is that adults and children of all ages will become interested in the trip.

The first stop with something of interest for all ages is the Museum of Science, Science Park, on the Charles River between Storrow Drive and Memorial Drive. Call (617)723-2500 for ticket information, show times and directions.

The Museum has over 450 permanent exhibits, frequent traveling exhibitions and a staff of science interpreters to make your journey more pleasant.

A press release notes, "The Museum seeks to stimulate curiosity and interest in science by demonstrating the fun, excitement and relevance of science in our daily lives."

The shows range from the study of the Boston skyline, laser shows and "celestial adventures" in the Charles Hayden Planetarium to the wonders of the world around us in the Mugar Omni Theater.

In its final three weeks, the Museum is presenting the only United States stop of the international exhibit "Leonardo da Vinci, Scientist, Inventor, Artist." The show will be leaving on September 1.

Tickets are still available for the presentation billed as the "most comprehensive exhibit ever assembled on Leonardo da Vinci."

There are hands on pieces as well as theater experiences, more than 150 facsimile sketches and 25 working models of da Vinci's inventions. Over 20 CD-ROM stations provide a wealth of information about the man and his times.

Guided tours for the blind or visually impaired are offered on Saturday, August 16 and Wednesday, August 20. Call (617)589-0419 to make a reservation.

Keeping up to date, the Hayden Planetarium is featuring "Messenger From Mars" a 360-degree view of the red planet down loaded from the internet and projected on the Planetarium Dome. The program promises to keep viewers up to date on the latest findings of the Pathfinder now exploring our neighboring planet.

The Omni Theater will take the viewer on a trip of sight and sound sensations making the audience feel as if they are part of the picture on the special five story high, domed screen. This is not for those people that suffer from motion sickness.

The Computer Museum, 300 Congress Street, near the waterfront, is another place where children will be fascinated for hours. Interactivities include helping a robot chef make a sandwich or saying hello to R2-D2 bringing to life a world of real robots and "smart machines."

Participants can travel through a time tunnel and trace today's laptops and other personal computers back to their giant ancestors. There is also a virtual reality exhibit where you can "navigate virtual worlds on VR bikes, cars and planes."

For more information on the Computer Museum call (617)423-6758.

The press release reminds us, "For 1,000 days in the early 1960's, America became new and fresh."

You can journey back to those days of "Camelot" by taking in the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum in Boston's Columbia Point section on Morrissey Boulevard. More information can be obtained by calling (617) 929-4500.

On display is the inspiration of the youngest president of our country. It is presented in 25 "dramatic exhibits" drawing on rare film and television footage, historic Presidential documents, personal family keepsakes and treasures from the White House.

The Museum will take the visitor back to the World War II days of P.T. 109 and up to the fateful day in Texas when the President was assassinated. Information is provided on Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onnasis and her days as the first lady.

Another way to enjoy a hot, but clear day is to go to the top of the tallest building in Boston and scan the surrounding towns in all directions. From the top of the 750 foot high John Hancock Building, which dominates Copley Square, you can see as far as the White Mountains in New Hampshire to the north or the ships going to and coming from the sea to the east.

To the south you can see Plymouth Rock and parts of Cape Cod. To the west, a clear day will provide you with a view of the Berkshire Mountains.

If the day is not that clear the vacationer may want to partake of the building's many other exhibits. "Boston 1775" is a show featuring music, narration, special effects and a miniature colonial Boston, all designed to take the viewer back to a time "when the city first simmered, then boiled over with revolution."

Witness the Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's Ride and the Battle of Bunker Hill.

SkyLine Boston has noted architectural historian Walter Muir Whitehill narrating the changes that brought the city from a small peninsula town to the world class city of today.

Also present is an Aviation Radio that lets the visitor listen in on the conversations between the tower and the planes landing and taking off from Logan Airport. Another point of interest is the Computer Exhibit and the overhead Photorama.

For more information and admission prices call (617) 572-6420.

Many people are interested in the history of the whaling ships and the flourishing China Trade that kept the Boston economy alive in our early years. The place to find out more about this is the Peabody Essex Museum in Salem. The vast Museum is located on Route 1a in the heart of Salem's historic district. It includes many examples of historic architecture with such buildings as the East India Marine Hall (1824-25) and the Crowninshield-Bentley House (1727-30).

The Museum was founded in 1799 by 22 sea captains "to preserve the art treasures that they brought back from their voyages."

These treasures include maritime masterpieces, Eastern Art and other fascinating studies.

For more information call (508)745-9500 or 1-800-745-4054.

Most people in this area are familiar with the Plimoth Plantation in Plymouth. However, while you are taking in that site you might want to walk a few blocks up the street to Cranberry World offering free admission and free cranberry refreshments.

The exhibits range from outdoor demonstration bogs to antique and modern harvesting tools. There are also audio-visual presentations and free summer concerts.

For adults nighttime entertainment can include any one of many theater presentations in and around the city or you may wish to travel a little for some unique fun.

A short trip to Connecticut will bring you to Foxwoods and Mohegan Sun. where you can find the latest in entertainment and of course 24-hour gambling

MOVIES

by Rochelle Flynn — Short Takes

Conspiracy Theory: A conspiracy nut who seemingly stumbles onto something dangerous, Mel Gibson quickly becomes the main reason to watch this thriller.

He is endearingly amusing as a quick-witted, ultra jittery New York cab driver who spouts his theories to anyone who will listen. We can't help liking this character, who is as sweet as he is paranoid. He's also stuck on Julia Roberts, a Justice department investigator drawn into one of his schemes. It isn't long before she discovers Gibson may be on to something real this time.

When the focus moves from characterization to plot, the flick immediately falls apart. It is almost insulting that the film makers foist such a convoluted and outlandish story on us. It is so ridiculous you cannot help but wish Gibson had been left to share his theories and spar with Roberts. She, surprisingly, is quite Gibson's equal, giving a more interesting performance than we've seen in some time.

Rated R.

Free Willy 3: The Rescue: So far, this is the best of the three movies about a boy and his killer whale. Beautifully photographed, it's worth watching just for the gorgeous British Columbia scenery. It helps that the story is well thought out and more expertly executed than the first two films in this series. This time, whalers are illegally hunting the giant Orcas. But the fishermen are given a valid point of view, which is as important as the friendship between the two key boys in the story. It all gets a little too corny, but overall this is a decent famly picture. Rated PG ***

Spawn: It's big. It's bold. It's Excedrin Headache 157.

Visually, this comic book inspired movie is thrilling. The dark and edgy special effects are intense and, in some instances, quite dazzling. The plot, however, is so incoherent and ridiculous you may find yourself nodding off, despite all the smoke and brimstone emanating from the screen.

Our superhero,of sorts, is a government worker who sells his soul to the devil, and then reconsiders once he becomes his spawn. John Leguizamo is deliciously vile as the Clown from Hell, but Martin Sheen so chews up the scenery one can't help feeling embarrassed for him. The dialogue is either trite or base, but altogether uninspiring. The only real reason to watch this flick is for the magical quality evoked by masterful morphing. And that is not a strong enough reason. Rated PG-13 * 1/2

187: This noble failure features a superb performance by Samuel L. Jackson as a teacher who returns to his most beloved profession after being stabbed nearly to death by a student gangsta. The social commentary is astute, as are many of the supporting performances. The filmmakers just try to cover too much ground and the story wanders away from reality in the final act. Still, you have to give all involved credit for trying, especially Scott Tagemann, a former teacher who wrote the script. The title, incidentally, refers to the police code for homicide. Rated R 1/2

Picture Perfect: Except for a finely shaded performance by Kevin Bacon as an office Lothario, there is very little perfect about this picture. Advertising writer Jennifer Aniston finds life is smoother when she allows everyone to believe she is securely engaged to a man (Jay Mohr) she met but once. Then she must produce him for an office dinner. Naturally, she finds she quite likes him. The flaw here is that he falls for her, while the rest of us see her as a manipulative, self-involved whiner who comes across as a mental case. Aniston may be cute, but she cannot rise above the insipidness of the plot or her unsympathetic character.

Rated PG-13 **

Nothing to Lose: The title for this flick is perfect, because you lose nothing by watching it. You don't gain much either, as this is a mildly amusing comedy that is, unfortunately for the talented cast, too easily forgotten.

Tim Robbins is an advertising exec who is having a very bad day. By the time he is carjacked by Martin Lawrence, he's decided his life is worth nothing, and kidnaps his would-be robber. This witty set-up goes nowhere in a hurry, as the filmmakers couldn't decide if this was to be a sentimental or a hard bitten comedy. By trying to be both, it became neither. What does work is the pairing of Robbins and Lawrence. They are two opposites in every sense, from their physical appearances to their comedic styles. Their efforts are what glue this flick together, even if it doesn't stick in your memory banks. Rated R 1/2

George of the Jungle: This isn't exactly jungle rot, but it certainly is not on a par with the old Jay Ward cartoon of the 1960's. Those animated shorts were goofy, but very clever and always humorous. The same cannot be said for this live action adventure. Brendan Fraser, looking very buff in his loincloth, has a real gift for physical humor and there are some diverting sight gags. However, unless you are about nine years old, this is not going to charm, as the writing varies only from the banal to the dull. Rated PG *1/2

Contact: Very, very rarely does a movie come along with the ability to amaze a shameless and hardened moviegoer. This is that exception.

Jodie Foster plays a brilliant scientist who hears the first intergalactic message ever recorded on earth. It is a discovery that changes not only her life, but the very way in which she views her world. This works on several levels, as every aspect of an alien encounter is examined, from the political to the theological to the financial. Director Robert Zemeckis juggles all of this intellectual fodder while maintaining an exciting, fast-paced adventure played out by a diverse and intriguing cast.

The special effects, beginning with a very classy prologue, are some of the best ever produced, and are seemlessly incorporated into the story. The performances, especially Foster's, are as riveting as the storyline. For once, Hollywood does not pander to the lowest common denominator, so this should generate plenty of post movie discussions. It may even encourage you to buy Carl Sagan's book, on which this was based. Rated PG ****

Men in Black: Joe Friday meets the Blues Brothers in this ultra hip and wildly amusing science fiction spoof. Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith are black-clad alien police who protect our planet not from space men, but from bad space men.

The premise here is that, yes, there are aliens among us, but these guys, working for a very retro and super secret outfit, keep our resident space creatures in line. When a really nasty, war mongering "bug" lands on the planet, Jones, with rookie Smith in tow, find themselves trying to save the planet. And looking very cool as they do so.

This is one of the few flicks to come along in years that is heavy on special effects, but maintains a credible storyline. The visuals are often spectacular, if a little slimy, and the humor is consistently clever. Of course, much of the fun does come from Jones and Smith, two very groovy cats with attitude to spare. Rated PG-13 1/2

Face Off: Bullets fly, boats explode and no one is who they seem to be in this high-tech, action extravaganza starring Nicolas Cage and John Travolta.

There's no denying that this is a bloated, over the top movie, but director John Woo cleverly waves an emotional subtext into this daring story about an FBI man who literally becomes his arch enemy. Because we care about the chaacters, we can swallow a story that is pure fantasy and easily buy into a gimmick that works better than anticipated.

One expects blood and bombs from Woo, the Hong Kong director who made it big in American with Broken Arrow. More surprising are the performances he culls from Travolta and Cage. They fully inhabit two men on either side of the law, both more alike than either wants to believe. As they walk in each other's shoes, the story becomes richer and richer as it takes on an ever more personal edge.

Exciting and thrilling as this may be, it is so overburdened with violence that the action sequences eventually become rather dull. The characterizations however, are never less than fascinating. Rated R 1/2

Zoo attendance up 49%

Zoo New England is ROARing with excitement over just release attendance figures- Officials credit the July 4 opening of a spectacular new lion exhibit at the Franklin Park Zoo with a 168% increase in visitation at the Zoo over the same month last year.

"We are extremely pleased that so many families are rediscovering the Zoos," said Brian A. Rutledge, who just completed his first full year at President/CEO of the Franklin Park and Stone Zoos. This proves that the citizens of Massachusetts are eager to embrace these facilities and anxious to support their growth.

Attendance at the Stone Zoo, which has been featuring Santa Castle's Summer Jubilee is up 10% from July 1996. total attendance for the first seven months of 1997 has skyrocketed 72% at the Franklin Park Zoo and 20% at the Stone Zoo. Combined attendance for both facilities is up 49% year-to-date.

Attendance growth has been complimented by significant changes in food and gift concessions, which has resulted in a doubling of revenues in both areas. At the same time, a revamping of the Zoos' membership operation has helped to increase memberships from less than 1,200 at the beginning of the year to more than 3,800 by the end of July.

"We had a responsibility to get our won house in order first and to run these Zoos as efficiently and effectively as possible," Rutledge added. "Now that we are doing that, we will be in a better position to begin the largest task of building two great Zoos for the citizens of Massachusetts."

Reading in Reading

'One' world

"Visitors to the Reading Public Library can now stroll through the artwork of the Louvre, perform research at the Library of Congress, or view the space shuttle from the NASA website on the World Wide Web at a much faster rate than at home, thanks to a partnership between MediaOne (formerly Continental Cablevision) and library administrators," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"Library Connections is an innovative partnership program created to help libraries better serve their community with Broadband services, including high-speed Internet access via MediaOne Express and educational video programming, all at no charge. The Reading Public Library is one of three pilot libraries in the project, along with Ames Free Library in Easton and the Newton Free Library.

"'Library Connections was developed to reaffirm MediaOne's support of the local communities we serve,' explained Rick Jenkinson, MediaOne's Regional Director of Communications and Public Affairs. 'This program expands upon MediaOne's existing community initiatives, including free educational video programming to all schools, and a new employee volunteer program called WOW (Widen Our World) by One. Library Connections reinforces the libraries' role as the community's primary source of information by providing enhanced technology, video, information, and entertainment services.'

"The program is made possible through MediaOne's two-way Broadband network. Broadband is a powerful wire with enormous capacity and two-way capabilities that is changing the way consumers work, play, learn and communicate.

"MediaOne Express, the company's high-speed Internet access service, provides library patrons with the fastest Internet connection available to the computer. For residents who currently use a 28.8 modem, it will be 50 times faster; for those with a 14.4 modem, it will be 100 times faster. Because it is a Broadband service, no phone line is used, so there is never any dial-up or busy signals. Library visitors will now benefit from unprecedented speed when accessing information, multimedia, or graphic-intensive websites on the Internet.

"'We are in the business of providing information to our customers,' said Deirdre Hanley, Director of the Reading Public Library. 'We are excited to expand our current Internet program by providing our library patrons with the fastest Internet connection available today. Our visitors will be amazed at the efficiency of accessing the Web and downloading materials at unprecedented speed. The high-speed access will benefit everyone whether they are students researching information for reports or adults searching for job opportunities.'

"MediaOne has also provided the library with a host of video-based services, including educational videotapes, free standard video service, and a 'TV Tool-Kit' of tips to help Reading families find quality programming on TV.

At Foxwoods, you can combine your pleasure with a little education by visiting the Museum depicting the struggles between the Mashantucket Pequot Tribe and the early settlers of New England.

In the food court a special light show is put on every hour telling of the legends of the indian tribe that now owns and operates the casino and hotel in Ledyard, Ct.

Just south of Norwich, Ct. is the reservation of the Mohegan Indians who own and operate the Mohegan Sun. This is the newest of the two casinos and also offers a diversity of entertainment for young and old.

If beer and ale are your pleasure, a little closer to Boston are the Samuel Adams Boston Beer Museum and the Anheuser-Busch Brewery.

The Samuel Adams Museum is located on Armory Street (off Boylston Street) in Brookline, for more information call (617) 522-9080. After a presentation on the history of Samuel Adams, the patriot and the beer, visitors will also get a chance to see how it is brewed and then have a taste.

The Anheuser-Busch Merrimack Brewery in Merrimack, N.H. is open to the public and not only demonstrates how the beer is made on the first Saturday of the month the famous Budweiser Clydesdales are present for pictures. The tour also includes the Old World styled Clydesdale Village.

Prime time for boat thieves

The boating season is underway and boat thieves are on the move, too, according to BOAT/U.S. (Boat Owners Association of The United States), the nation's largest organization of recreational boaters.

Thieves steal an average of 1,000 boats a month at an annual cost to boaters and their insurance companies of $40 million. More than half of all stolen boats are motorboats in the 18-to-23-foot range. The odds of recovering a stolen vessel are only one in ten, the Association said.

Equipment left unsecured on board is also popular with thieves. Electronics such as GPS receivers and LORAN, fishfinders, VHF radios, stereo systems and inflatable dinghies are prime targets.

Some tips from BOAT/U.S. to help protect your boat from thieves:

Don't make your boat an easy target. Use theft-warning decals, locks and alarm systems. Anti-theft devices aren't fool-proof, but they can make a boat burglary difficult enough to discourage many crooks.

Remove valuable items, such as electronics, especially if you plan to be away from your boat for a long time.

If you leave your boat on a trailer, use a wheel or trailer hitch lock, or remove one or more of the wheels.

Keep receipts for major equipment purchases and copies of boat ownership documents as well as photos of your boat and its equipment, on shore in a secure place.

If your boat or any of its equipment is stolen or vandalized, reporting the incident quickly to the local police and your insurance company may improve the odds of recovery.

Be funny, be punny!

The World's Seven "Worst Puns" for the past twelve months have been selected by the editors of the Pun American Newsletter.

The "seven worst" come from more than 2,000 puns submitted by readers of the publication:

1. The miserly squirrel could never find a mate because he insisted on a prenutchell agreement-from Seymour Kapensky, Southfield, MI.

2. The beautiful girl told the nimble-fingered pianist to keep his dissonance. - from George Malone, Spartanburg, SC.

3.Regarding July 4th: Don't think for a minute about being among the first to go forth on third to get a fifth for the Fourth - for he who drives forth with a fifth on the Fourth, may never drive forth on the fifth. - by the late Philip R. Kasik, Riverside, IL.

4. Shepherding is the only occupation mentioned in our national anthem. How else could we explain "o'er the ramparts we watched?" - from Becky Blackley, Brisbane, CA.

5. My friend was going to write a drinking song, but he never got past the first bar. - from A.J. Kohler, Monroe, MI.

6. If two people of the same religion get married, is this a same-sect marriage? - from Chuck Markman, Boca Raton, FL.

7. A friend attending a party with the late Cardinal Joseph Bernadin of Chicago mentioned that his daughter and her little girl, on their daily afternoon walks, passed the Cardinal's house-whereupon the Cardinal suggested that the little girl stop and see him on her forthcoming "tricks or treats" excursion. All the following week, the mother had the child practice saying, "Thank you your Eminence-Thank you your Eminence-Thank you your Eminence." On the big day, the child knocked on the Cardinal's door. He came and gave the child candy. She looked at the candy, smiled at the Cardinal, and said, "Thank you, your M and M's."

A complimentary copy of the Pun American Newsletter, which in previous issues published these puns, is available without cost to readers by sending a stamped, addressed, #10 envelope (business size) to the Pun American Newsletter, 1165 Elmwood Place, Deerfield, IL.

The Tea Club iced tea recipe

Over 80% of all tea sold in the United States ends up on ice--a phenomenon that is unique to our country. Making iced tea from scratch is easy and fun. High quality ingredients and few general guidelines will help you produce an amazing array of fine iced teas to quench your summer thirsts:

1. Always use high quality full-leaf teas--they retain their flavor and character better than tea bag tea.

2. If you are using flavored teas, make sure the flavorings are 100% natural. Artificial flavors are cheaper and stronger, but tend to have a synthetic taste that pales in comparison to their natural cousins.

3. Use twice as much tea as you would normally use when making hot tea. This will help compensate for the extra water that will be added by melting ice.

The Tea Club offers a wide variety of teas produced in the world's finest growing regions. Many are excellent for icing. Each month, the club features 2 rarely available selections of fine full-leaf tea. Members can choose to receive all traditional teas, all herbal teas, or a combination of both. Each tea comes with tasting notes and brewing instructions. The club also sends a copy of its exclusive 'Guide to Tasting and Brewing Fine Tea' with the first month's delivery.

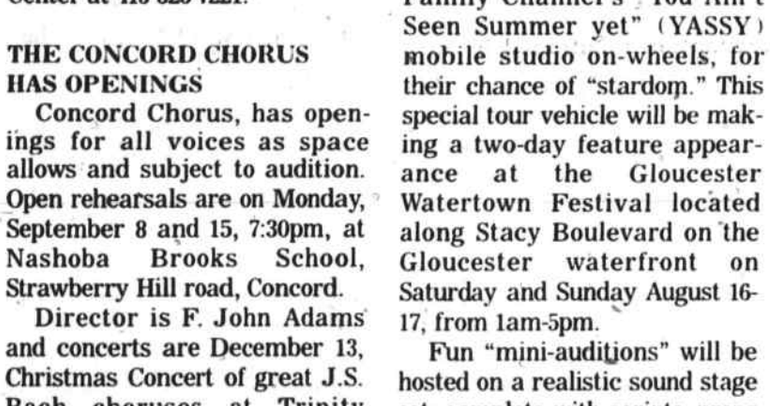

Membership is $8.50 (plus $3.25 shipping & handling), per month. Special gift membership packages are also available.

Prostate cancer

A third treatment option

Cancer of the prostate, a walnut-sized gland in the male reproductive system, is the most common cancer in men over 50, and is the second-leading cause of death from cancer in men. One in five American men develops the disease in his lifetime, according to American Cancer Society estimates.

As with many forms of the disease, the key to successful treatment is early detection. For this reason, both the American Urological Association and the American Cancer Society recommend that men over 50 have a rectal examination and a prostate specific antigen (PSA) blood test during a yearly medical check-up. PSA is a protein that is often elevated in the blood of patients with prostate cancer.

The great frustration in treating prostate cancer is the difficulty in determining which tumors will grow slowly, causing little harm and which will follow a rapid and lethal course. Until techniques become available that illuminate the distinction, American physicians advocate treatment in most patients under the age of 75.

Standard therapy involves surgery, radiation therapy or a combination of both. The appropriate course of treatment for the individual patient is determined by several factors, including age, how advanced the disease is and the patient's own reference. "Surgery is usually recommended for younger people, while older patients will be directed to non-surgical treatment such as radiation," says Robert Krane, MD, professor and chairman of the department of urology at Boston University School of Medicine.

The success rate for treating prostate cancer is high when the disease is diagnosed in its early stages, though both standard treatments have side effects, which often include impotence.

The therapy referred to, seed therapy, is actually an old approach being resurrected in a newly refined form. While the new technique has only been used for five to seven years, early results indicate outcomes as good as conventional external radiation therapy or radical prostatectomy. This treatment, too, has side effects, but does offer a reasonable alternative to surgery and to classical radiotherapy in some cases.

The procedure involves implanting radioactive pellets directly into the prostate to destroy tumor cells. Traditionally, this process was ineffective, because the placement of the radioactive pellets was not uniform, leaving "cold spots" between the pellets, thus preventing complete eradication of the tumors.

Today, the results have been greatly improved with the help of ultrasound machines that pinpoint precisely where to place and space the seeds. The treatment may be done on an outpatient basis or require only one night in the hospital, which is quicker and less expensive than the other treatment options. Side effects of seed therapy include temporarily increased urination and rectal irritation. Early reports indicate that 20 to 30 percent of patients may develop impotence, but the numbers may be higher over the longer term.

With its first patients scheduled for seed therapy in July, "Boston University Medical Center becomes the only Center in the region to offer the full range of treatments for prostate cancer," according to Krane.

External radiation therapy is a process in which x-rays are used to kill cancer cells. Patients may experience urinary urgency, frequency and burning during treatment. These symptoms will usually resolve following radiation in the vast majority of patients. Approximately 50 percent of patients become impotent as a result of the treatment.

Surgical removal of the prostate, a procedure called a radical prostatectomy, is intended to remove the cancer in its entirety. Following surgery, twenty to fifty percent of prostatectomy patients have partial urinary control and stress incontinence-leakage caused by any kind of physical pressure-and more than half have minimum leakage. In addition, the majority of patients will face impotence after surgery.

The treatment option that is best for the individual patient depends on the patient's situation, says Krane.

Mind power the key to losing weight

Everyone has gone on a "crash" diet lasting anywhere from one day to six weeks. Yet, statistics show that 50% of all adult Americans today are overweight despite the fact sales of exercise equipment and instant diet milk shakes have become a billion dollar a year industry. Mind Over Platter reveals details on how to establish and maintain an ideal weight. Included are details on the various methods and dietary programs, step-by-step instructions on how to change eating habits and more. The book is available for $12.50 plus $3 shipping from AMB, P.O. Box 687, Elm Grove, WI 53122.

According to author and physician Dr. Peter G. Lindner, most diets demand sacrifices the average overweight individual is not prepared to make over an extended period of time. "Most often, the individual or company prescribing the diet tells you what you must or must not eat, yet very rarely do they tell you how you can do it, and stick to it." says Lindner. Over the past 30 years, Dr. Lindner has successfully treated 2,000 patients for weight problems. "The key to losing weight is enhancing your ability to focus your attention and stimulate your imagination so that you build a positive mind-set that will help you change the way you eat. The methods I use have stood the test of time. They have been personally used by me and my patients."

Try these tricks for healthy hurry up meals

It's called "assembly-style" cooking or speed scratch-and it means you can produce healthy meals using convenience foods and value-added products that cut preparation time to just minutes. The secret is becoming so familiar with wonderful, time-saving, flavorful ingredients-like walnuts seasoned ready-cut tomatoes, olives, beans and ethnic bottle sauces-that combining them becomes second nature. Following are a few ideas to get you started improvising.

Walnuts, add terrific taste, texture and gourmet appeal to most any dish. "They are also packed with nutrition. Walnuts are rich in vitamins and minerals and provide essential fatty acids like omega 3's that help prevent heart disease and cancer. Toss them into salads, on appetizers and pizzas, into rice and pasta dishes, stir-fries and wrapped sandwiches. Instant panache!

Thin or small pastas like angel hair, orzo, couscous and tiny bows cook quickly and create delicious meals with the addition of walnuts, chicken or fish and chopped veggies. Add the vegies to the boiling pasta, then toss with walnuts and cooks meat.

Frozen, filled pastas from the supermarket are delicious eaten hot, topped with bottled pesto and marinara source. Or prepare them cold, tossing with bottled dressing, walnuts, frozen peas and diced green pepper.

Ethic sauces make marvelous marinades. Brush fish or pork chops with salsa, walnut pesto, remoulade or Thai peanut sauce or instant gourmet flavor. They also make wonderful dressings or pasta d rice salads.

Salsa adds sizzling flavor! For a quick zesty omelette, add mushrooms, cheese, olives and salsa. A teaspoon of salsa on cottage cheese, in a burrito or wrapped sandwich makes it an instant gourmet treat.

To add extra flavor to quick-cook rice, cook it in salsa or spice tomato juice. Them stir in cooked meat, vegetables or beans, shredded cheese and walnuts for a satisfying main dish.

Start with readymade pasta and tomato sauces from classic Marinara to Mushroom and Chunky Garden variety for quick, delicious pastas, skillet meals, pizzas and hot sandwiches. Add your own fresh ingredients, like mushrooms, garlic, walnuts and additional seasonings to make the sauces more homemade.

Black beans-and garbanzos, pintos and white beans- are satisfying and delicious tossed into stews, salads, chili, pasta and rice dishes. It's as easy as opening the can.

Today's convenience foods, and many legendary foods like walnuts that are versatile, delicious and require almost no preparation, provide the starting point for shortcut cooking. Just experiment a little and you're on our way!

To get more quick preparation tips and shortcut recipes using walnuts, send a self-addressed, 9"x12" stamped envelope ($.78 postage) to: Walnut Marketing Board, 545 Sansome St., San Francisco, CA 94111.

Do you know the best asthma attack defense?

The American Lung Association reports 14.6 million Americans suffer from asthma. This is a 61 percent increase from the early '80s, but there is relief. According to researchers, by eliminating key allergens such as dust mites, animal dander, cockroach debris and molds from the home, allergy-induced asthma attacks can be significantly decreased.

Since the energy crisis of the '70s, homes have been built virtually airtight. This move toward energy-efficiency has, in effect, turned residences into sick homes laden with harmful allergens and contaminants. Without effective cleaning practices, these allergens are continually stirred up and inhaled by the home's occupants each time there is movement within the home.

Alfred V. Zamm, author of "Why Your House May Endanger Your Health" reports that because of today's well-built homes, indoor air is more polluted than outdoor air because of the high concentrations of contaminant's trapped inside.

"Our Healthy Touch system, removes more allergy causing contaminant's from customers' homes than any other residential cleaning service," says Matt Donnelly, owner of THE MAIDS serving Reading, North Reading, Middleton, Lynnfield, Peabody, Wakefield and Stoneham.

THE MAIDS Healthy Touch system is a three-pronged approach:

First, a four-person team following a 22-step task list cleans according to industrially-engineered cleaning principals. This means they follow an efficient system which minimizes the time in the home, but maximizes their cleaning effectiveness.

Second, THE MAIDS use environmentally-preferable cleaning solutions which are first applied to a cloth rather than sprayed on the surface of an item. This reduces the amount of excess solution that is emitted into the air.

Third, a custom designed, four-filtered back pack vacuum is used. This vacuum removes dirt down to 1/210th the diameter of a human hair. The vacuum bag is also treated with a bactericide/fungicide so biopollutants are defunct once inside the vacuum.

School Notes by Phyllis Nissen

The more things change... (Part Deux)

Sweeping reforms

The Reading Middle School Restructuring Committee plans sweeping changes at the Coolidge and Parker Middle Schools. Please see part one of "The more things change..." in last week's "Middlesex East Supplement."

"School Committee members Robert Spadafora and Vice Chairman Tom Stohlman in particular were wary that eliminating ability grouping may, in fact, harm 'gifted' math students," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"'How do we challenge students who are excelling?' said Spadafora. 'Those on the other side of the bell curve?'

"Parker principal Jack Delaney responded that all students would be expected to perform at the highest, level 1 standards rather than just the 'gifted students.' 'If you teach to the middle of the class, you defeat the purpose of heterogeneous (mixed-level) grouping,' said Delaney."

'Self-fulfilling prophecies'

"Delaney also argued that placing students in groups by their perceived ability at such a young age leads to diminished expectations and self-fulfilling prophecies of failure (please see above).

"Stohlman suggested that gifted students could be further challenged by supplementing their regular classroom work, citing the efforts of the Coolidge Science Olympiad Team and their extracurricular efforts. But he, too, was wary."

'No excuses'

"'The positive impact (of eliminating math tracking) could also be diluted by putting the highly motivated with the less motivated students (please see above). Opportunity should always exist for students to excel - there are no excuses for failing in the Reading School System.'

"Superintendent Dr. Harry Harutunian, also a participant at the meeting, stated that 'vertical and horizontal articulation' would be implemented to ensure the program's success. That is, teachers in the elementary and high school would need to be involved in the evaluation of the student progress.

"Coolidge and Parker have eliminated ability tracking in all subjects in grades 6 through 8 with the exception of math, and according to Coolidge Principal John Doherty, 'after the five years we have done so, we have seen positive results in the three other subjects (science, English, social studies).'

"Vice Principal Louis Adreani of the Coolidge Middle School, who has seen ability tracking come and go, said that 'as a math teacher, I prefer the levels. I know what the research says, but in my estimation, the school is still out on whether math grouping works.'

"Adreani, however, was willing to follow the committee's plan. 'We'll see how things work in grade six,' Adreani said.

"In the meantime, the Middle School Restructuring Committee will continue to meet and work on getting the plan ready for the coming school year."

Celeste receives teaching award

"Former Stoneham resident Marie J. Celeste was recently honored for her teaching by the Ann Arundel Community College in Maryland," notes the "Stoneham Independent."

"She received the Award for Teaching Excellence which is awarded through the Student Association. She had been lecturing in education since 1994, and is presently a candidate for a PhD in Developmental Psychology with emphasis on Infancy from George Washington University.

"She graduated from Stoneham High in 1979. She received her BA and Master of Science degree from Florida State University. She is the daughter of Vincent and Marie Celeste of Il Celestine Terrace."

If you'd like to read about your favorite school, student or teacher in "School Notes," please send school newsletters and other relevant information to Phyllis Nissen, "School Notes," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867. We welcome student writing.

Watershed data available

The Merrimack River Initiative (MRI) has completed an inventory of the natural and demographic resources within the Merrimack River Watershed. The Merrimack River Watershed is the fourth largest in New England, extending from the White Mountains of Ne Hampshire to the Atlantic Ocean in Massachusetts.

Its territory is also among some of the most developed in the Northeast, and the watershed has come under tremendous pressures form pollution, development and use. The Use & Value Resource Inventory will will prove a useful management tool as the future of the watershed is determined.

The Merrimack River Initiative represents various stakeholders within the watershed, including federal, regional and state agencies, governments, businesses, industries, recreational interests and environmental groups. It has developed a strategic management plan for the watershed, and produced numerous tools to aid to implementing that plan. the Use & Value Resource Inventory is one such tool. The MRI is administered by the New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission (NEIWPCC), and funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Data Catalogue indexes date on a wide range of resources withing the watershed. The data encompasses fishing areas, waterfowl habitat, Atlantic flyway breeding areas, wetlands, key aquatic and riparian habitats, and ares of aquatic and shoreland recreation. It also includes land-use information, population figures, water flow data and water quality studies.

"The Date Catalogue is a software program that is easily searched and browsed through various key words," explains Jenkins. "If you are searching for waterfowl data, for example, you an find not only who has waterfowl data but what form it is in, and how you can get it. prior to assembling the date in a format that people felt would be user-friendly. The Data Catalogue is available through NEIWPCC, and can also be down-loaded from the Merrimack River Watershed wed site at http://www.merrimack.org."

The inventory and analysis are available in hard copy from NEIWPCC. For more information about these projects, or to obtain copies of the Users' Needs Analysis, Use & Value Resource Inventory or Data Catalogue, call NEIWPCC at 508-658-0500.

THERE WAS A TIME WHEN NEW SAILS REALLY DID COST AN ARM AND A LEG.

The price of freedom has never been small, as those who served on USS Constitution discovered on many occasions. She and her crews battled the French, the British, even the infamous Barbary Pirates. But she has been unable to sail on her own for over a hundred years. Hence the Pennies Campaign To Sail Old Ironsides. Our goal is to enable this great ship to move once again under her own power. To do this we must raise money to buy sails. 100% of all funds collected will go to the ship. To contribute, please send all donations to Old Ironsides Pennies Campaign, Charlestown Cooperative Bank, 201 Main Street, Charlestown, Massachusetts 02129, or call 617-241-2995 for more information.

Rustic, cozy country-style home

A CHARMING COVERED PORCH and a rustic stone chimney give this country-style home real appeal.

Plan G-57 by HomeStyles Designers Network, offers 1,191 square feet of living space. This cozy, rustic home gets the most from its square footage by virtue of an efficient interior layout.

The spacious living rom features a 15-foot sloped ceiling accented by exposed beams and a corner fireplace - an eye-catching focal point for certain.

THE ENTRY OPENS IMMEDIATELY into the large living room. The dining room flows from the living room, and includes a door to the utility room and garage in back. To the left is the U-shaped kitchen. The secluded master bedroom is off of the kitchen. Across the home, a short hall provides entry to two bedrooms and a full bath.

The dining room flows nicely from the living room, and has handy access to tue utility area and a backyard patio. The U-shaped kitchen, too, is designed for efficiency while conveying a sense of openness.

Just off the kitchen, the large master bedroom is secluded from the rest of the home, and includes a private bath and a separate dressing area with a dual-sink vanity.

Across the home, a short hall connects the remaining two bedrooms and provides entry to a full bath.

A two-car garage and a storage space are neatly tucked behind the home.

G-57 Statistics

Design G-57 has a living room, dining room, kitchen, three bedrooms and two full baths, totaling 1,191 square feet of living space. This plan includes a crawlspace or slab foundation, and 2x6 exterior wall framing. The two-car garage, combined with the storage and utility areas, provides an additional 572 square feet of space.

For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.

Trouble-shooting window shades

Window shades are easy to install and maintain.

They are sold by the width, measured from the tip of the round pin at one end of the roller to the tip of the flat pin, or spear, at the other end. The pin and spear fit into mounting brackets placed inside the window frame, on the face of the frame, or on the wall.

The shade itself is stapled or taped to the roller, which is usually made of wood or cardboard and has metal end caps. One end of the roller is hollow and contains the shade's spring. The lower the shade is pulled, the more the spring's tension increases. When the shade is raised, the spring uncoils rapidly, wrapping the shade around the roller.

A window shade is held in place by a pawl, a small latch that locks onto a ratchet tooth to stop the roller from turning. When you draw the shade down, it pulls the pawl away from the tooth and frees the roller. When you stop the shade, the pawl drops onto the ratchet to hold it in place.

Here are tips on window shade maintenance: Cleaning

— To clean a washable window shade, unroll it and spread it on a clean flat surface. Scrub both sides with detergent and hot water and a brush or cloth. Rinse with a clean damp cloth and let the shade dry thoroughly before rerolling.

— When shades that can't be washed are dirty, first vacuum them to remove all loose dirt.

Your home: Q & A

I would like to have a ceiling fan in my hall. Can I safely install it by myself?

Childhood fears are hard to shake, and electricity and I never have been the best of friends.

When it came time to install my first ceiling fan, I wasn't thrilled with the idea of making the electrical connections. I switched off the circuit breaker, cutting all power to the line, but I was still nervous when it came time to touch the wires.

Actually, it's good to be a little nervous when you work with electricity. When you're a little nervous, you'll be extra careful.

I love ceiling fans because they're attractive, inexpensive to operate, and they keep me as cool as I want to be. One of my daughters likes her room as cold as a refrigerator, but I usually close off the air conditioner vents to my room and use the ceiling fan instead. In the winter, I flip the switch to reverse the direction of the fan blades, and it blows the heat down.

The easiest way to install a ceiling fan is where you already have an overhead light fixture. I like to turn the light on first, then flip the circuit breaker to disconnect power to the fixture. When the light goes off, I know I've switched off the correct breaker and there is no electricity running through the circuit. If you're really squeamish about this, you can get a hand-held meter to confirm the line safe to touch.

Once the power's off, remove the existing light fixture and draw a simple sketch of how the wires from the ceiling are hooked together. If there are multiple connections, you could disconnect them all and not be able to reassemble them properly.

There are two ways to install the metal fan box, and neither is all that difficult. One involves going up to the attic and installing a wooden support to which the box, and then the fan, will be attached. The other, which you'll have to do if you're putting the fan on the first floor of a two story house, involves installing a metal support bracket.

The attic method

Go up to your attic and find the hole in the ceiling where the light fixture was hanging. Bracketing the hole will be a pair of wooden ceiling joists. You're going to attach a wooden support between those joists, and screw your ceiling fan box into the wood support.

To do that, measure the space between the ceiling joists and cut a wooden two-by-four so that it will fit exactly between the joists. Position the two-by-four on its edge, rather than flat, and nail it to the joists. Use four 16-penny nails, two on each side. When you're through installing the wood brace, you should be able to do chin-ups from it.

You could position the wooden brace so that it touches the sheetrock, but if you do, you'll limit the room you'll have to fit the metal junction box. There's a box called a pancake box that works in this tight space.

But better still, position the brace one inch above the sheetrock. That will give you enough room to attach a 1 1/2-inch thick standard metal fan box to the edge of the wooden brace.

Push out two perforated holes in the back of the ceiling fan box and feed the original wires through. Then screw the fan box to the wooden brace, using two 1-1/2-inch wood screws.

Using a metal bracket

The second method costs a little more, but some prefer to do it this way because they don't like going up to their attic. After you turn off the power, remove the light fixture, take apart the wire connection and remove the old plastic junction box, you install a metal brace to support the ceiling fan.

The brace works like a shower curtain rod. You twist the rod and its gets longer, up to 24 inches. To install it, insert the brace into the hole in the ceiling, position it between the ceiling joists and twist it, until a pair of metal prongs pierce the wooden joists.

A ceiling fan mounting kit comes with a U-shape bracket that loops over the metal brace. The fan box and the ceiling fan both attach to the metal bracket.

Once the ceiling fan box and support is in place, it's pretty simple to hook the ceiling fan to the box. However, it helps to have a partner, so there will be somebody to hold the fan while you're connecting the wires and screwing the fan in place.

Hanging a ceiling fan is one of the easiest household electrical projects, and if you're anything like me, finishing the job and watching those blades spin will give you a great sense of accomplishment. I'm not afraid of electricity any more.

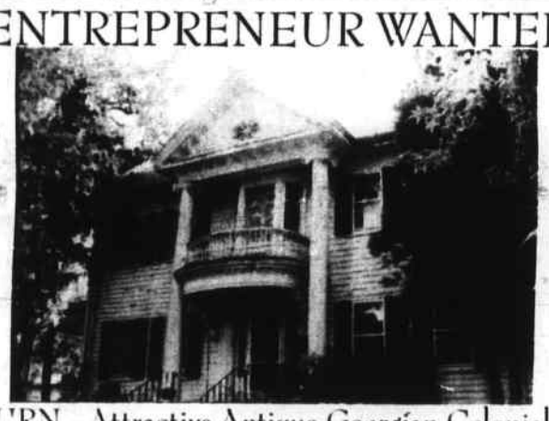

Don't cheat with a wrench

Among the many definitions of cheat listed in Webster's Dictionary is the following: "To deceive by trickery." This definition seems to aptly describe the wrench cheating technique; an unorthodox technique used by the unwary to get extra power by adding a length of pipe or other extension to the wrench handle to gain extra leverage.

The trick is that the tool user is in a sense falsely telling the wrench it can do more than it was designed to do. When this is the case, something has to give and it could result in damage to the tool, damage to the fastener, injury to the tool user or all three.

Shades From S-9

Then try rubbing them gently with a dough-type wallpaper cleaner or with an art-gum eraser.

— Worn or stained shades can be turned top to bottom. Carefully pry out the staples holding the shade to the roller. Turn a hem on the old top to make a new bottom. Tack or staple the worn bottom to the roller. Up-Down Trouble

— If a shade rolls up too fast, the spring may be too tight. Loosen tension by rolling the shade up and removing the roller from the brackets. By hand, unroll the shade halfway. Replace the roller in the brackets.

— If the shade rolls up too slowly, the spring may be too loose. Remove the shade from the brackets and roll it up by hand. Replace the shade on the brackets.

— If the shade can't be raised, the spring may be fully uncoiled. Remove the roller from the brackets. Unroll the shade halfway. Grip the flat spear with pliers and twist it until you feel tension. Then back off so the pawl hooks onto the ratchet. Adjust the tension by rolling the shade by hand and replacing it in the brackets.

— If the shade can't be pulled down, the ratchet is probably locked in place. Remove the roller from the brackets. Grip the flat spear with pliers and twist it clockwise to free the pawl, then release quickly. As the coil unwinds, the pin will spin counterclockwise. Readjust the tension by rolling the shade by hand.

— If the shade won't stay down, the ratchet may not be locking. Remove the shade from the brackets and take off the metal dust cap from the spear end. Brush off the pawl and ratchet and lightly lubricate them with penetrating oil. Brackets and Pins

— If the shade falls from the brackets, the brackets may be loose and the screws or nails holding them may need to be secured again. Or the brackets may be too far apart; reposition one or both of the brackets to move them closer. Shim brackets mounted inside the frame.

— If the shade binds, the brackets may be too close together. Try to reposition the brackets farther apart. As a last resort, shorten the pin with a hacksaw.

— If a shade wobbles, the round pin may be bent. Straighten it with pliers.

Repairs made easy

Leaking faucets, broken window panes and cracked walls are just a few of the common problems that try the patience and pocketbooks of homeowners and renters. Most of these problems are too small to justify calling in a contractor. So they remain undone and a constant source of inconvenience and irritation.

However, a new book by a nonprofit consumer group, shows that most of these repairs are easier than they appear to be and within the ability of almost anyone. The book presumes the reader has no knowledge at all about doing home repairs. It provides simple step-by-step, clear, precise directions, with hundreds of illustrations that can make a person who considers himself "all thumbs" into a competent do-it-yourselfer. It's the next best thing to having an in-person expert going through the repair with you.

For those who are novices, the book starts with a picture of each tool, nail and screw necessary and an explanation of how and when they are used.

What to look for in diagnosing a repair problem, the tools and particular materials you'll need to fix it and how to go about it all are simply stated with easy-to-understand drawings.

In addition to faucets, window panes and walls, the booklet has information on simple electrical repairs, how to fix screens and storm windows, plumbing and masonry repairs and even instructions on hanging pictures and shelves.

This book will definitely save you money on repair bills. In fact, many of these jobs can be done in less time than it requires to locate a competent repairman willing to do the work.

SMALL HOME REPAIRS MADE EASY can be obtained by sending $5.95 (plus $1.50 p&h) to Consumer Eduction, 1980 Springfield Ave, Maplewood, NJ 07040.

Your Garden - Your Home

Are you allergic to garden flowers?

If allergy anxieties have kept you from bringing the beautiful bounty of our flower garden indoors, you may be relieved to learn that garden flowers are rarely the cause of allergies, according to Sean McCarthy of Research Products Corporation, the maker of Space-Gard High Efficiency Air Cleaners.

But be careful about adding weeds, grasses or blossoming tree branches to our floral arrangements, McCarthy said. They are much more likely to cause sneezing and other allergy symptoms.

Plants with brightly colored, fragrant flowers are less likely to cause allergies because they have large pollens with a waxy, sticky coating that are primarily carried by insects, not the wind, according to the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology. The pollen of weeds, grasses and trees is much smaller and is more likely to get into our eyes and nose where it can trigger allergies.

If you love flowers, but hate allergies, there are a number of things you can do to help keep your home pollen-free, McCarthy said.

Stick to large bright flowers for your bouquets; avoid decorative touches like flowering branches, and dried weeds and grasses.

Keep your windows closed to keep pollen out. Use an air conditioner to help you say comfortable.

Install a whole house air cleaner to clean the air that circulates through your home's heating and cooling system. A media air cleaner removes up to 99 percent of pollen, and unlike electronic models, it doesn't produce ozone, which can aggravate breathing problems.

Never bring flowers with mold or fungus indoors.

Leave your gardening shoes outside to keep grass pollens out of your indoor air.

For more information about how a high efficiency air cleaner can help you keep pollen and other irritants out of your indoor air, call the Consumer Information Department of Research Products Corporation at 1-800-545-2219. Ask for the free booklet Air Cleaners for Allergy Relief. For more tips, see the Research products page on the Internet at www.Space-Gard.com.

Here are some additional safety tips from HTI using wrenches:

1. Select a wrench whose opening exactly fits the nut. Too large an opening can spread the jaws of a wrench. Too large a box-or socket wrench can mar or turn the corners of the nut. Exercise care in selecting inch wrenches for inch fasteners and metric wrenches for metric fasteners.
2. Never use a wrench as a hammer.
3. Always pull-never push- on a wrench and adjust your stance to prevent a fall in case something lets go.
4. To free a "frozen" nut or bolt use a striking face box wrench.
5. Always wear safety goggles

Help!

Your school child needs assistance

It's that back-to-school time again, when every store in town has a special sale on clothes, lunch boxes, notebooks and other school-related items. For storekeepers, all this upbeat advertising usually pays off.

But what your child needs on the first day of school can't be bought in any store. Your child needs you to be just as upbeat and just as excited about the opening day of school as any storekeeper. Even more so.

What does it take? Here are four simple suggestions from the principals of America's elementary and middle schools. If you follow them, the first day of school—and every day thereafter—will go more smoothly for you and your child:

•Begin School Day Schedule

Start now to ease out of your carefree summer schedule and into a school-year routine of regular meals (especially breakfast and lunch) and earlier bedtimes. Also, little by little, cut down the time your child can watch TV. (I know it's not easy. But please try.)

Make sure you and your child know how to get to and from school. Walk on the same streets and pathways your child will use every day. Has anything changed from last year—new construction, for example, or a new fence? If your child takes a bus, visit the bus stop together. Talk about bus safety. Emphasize good behavior on the bus.

Avoid the confusion of opening day. If your child is new to school, call the principal and ask for an informal tour for you and your child a few days or a week before school starts. Walk around the playground. Visit the cafeteria and library. Note the location of the bathrooms.

Finally: Read. I hope you've been reading to your youngster throughout the summer. If not, do it now. It's never too late. Check a few books and magazines out of the library and read them aloud to your child. Ask your child to read to you, too: the comics in the newspaper, descriptions in mail-order catalogues, and anything else that's handy.

Spend 15 to 30 minutes a day reading together. It could be your child's best preparation for a school year's worth of concentration and homework.

And I'll add my own fifth suggestion: Don't change when school opens. If you show your child you truly care about school and education, your child will care, too.

(Dr. Samuel G. Sava is executive director of the National Association of Elementary School Principals.)

To graduate

Community Service requirement in Lynnfield

Lynnfield Public Schools administrators want to empower Lynnfield High School students to strengthen their character, improve citizenship skills and contribute to the community.

The school will phase in a program that requires students to complete 35 hours of community service in order to graduate. The program will begin in September, but freshman members of the class of 2001 will be the first group of students that must fulfill the entire requirement.

The desire for a community service program originated with Superintendent of Schools Dr. Richard Palermo and is largely modeled after a program at Dover-Sherborn High School.

Students must complete 35 non-credit-bearing hours of community service, 20 of which must be served by the 10th grade in order for a student to advance to a junior homeroom. The remaining 15 hours must be completed by the end of the first semester of a student's senior year.

The community service must be fulfilled outside of the school day, be it before or after school, on weekends, during vacations or summer.

Community service already required of National Honor Society members will not count toward the new requirement, nor will court-ordered service. Students will be warned against accepting tips or other monetary compensation.

Students will be required to have community service forms signed by those who receive the service to verify the number of hours worked. A faculty advisor will review forms and spot check to verify that service has been completed.

The number of community service hours completed will appear on report cards, and the High School office will maintain a database for placements as a student reference.

School addition at McCall Middle School is very hot topic

By ELLEN KNIGHT

WINCHESTER — The town of Winchester, its residents, along with parents and students, have most of their attention these days towards an addition to the McCall Middle School, a former Winchester H.S. building just south of Winchester center.

However, it was the same issue that led to the building of the new high school of Skillings Road in the first place.

A look back on history, at this point, can also put today's problems on housing in Winchester in focus.

It was school overcrowding that first led to the construction of a junior high school in Winchester.

Over time, overcrowding has also resulted in a second junior high, swapping space with the high school, building additions, changing class allocations among the school buildings, and once again additions and renovations.

After 1903 when the new high school building opened, children over elementary school age went to school at the Wadleigh Grammar School and at the high school.

By the late 1920s both buildings were overcrowded, causing the school committee to lament their "deplorable conditions" and suggest a new building, a junior high school be built.

The concept of junior high was new then. At a special town meeting in June 1928 one opponent called it "an education experiment and a fad which Winchester could not afford." Yet the school committee recommended it and researched various sites, settling on Main Street near the fork with Washington Street as the best. It also published drawings of a suggested building.

At that time the town, faced with other school expenses, voted against spending money to build a new school building. The School Committee did not give up.

"What is there about a Junior High School ... that anybody can object to? As long as our citizens are satisfied with what is being taught in the Wadleigh, what difference does it make to any of us what it is called?" it questioned in 1929.

Moving forward

In 1931, finally, plans went forward. The office of R. Clipson Sturgis was chosen as architect.

Since the lot rose above the level of the street, it had to be leveled to the grade of Main Street. The materials from the leveling and from the excavation were deposited over the bank onto the lower level, lowering the height of the banking and the steepness of the slope.

The building was not as large as the one suggested in 1928. The school building committee reported in 1931, that it had been "very careful" to plan the building in such a manner that did not call "for any unnecessary things or for necessary things in an amount greater than is called for by wise economy."

"The building itself," the committee wrote, "is of red water-struck brick with cast-stone trimmings ... On the Main Street front the principal architectural features are the central facade which is entirely of cast-stone including the pillars, and the beautiful central tower which is of wood."

The style of the facade, as evidenced in the central entrance with its triangular pediment and columns with Corinthian capitals, was neoclassical.

The tower, they reported, was "more than a decorative feature. It is the ventilating duct for the entire building and is full of vents for all of the ventilating units."

It was, they were delighted to say, the "first entirely fireproof building. Even the inside trim is metal, with the exception of the doors. The roof is of slate."

The lower level in the rear (the area of current attention) was occupied by the gymnasium, with shower and locker rooms and athletic storage space.

The building, which opened in the fall of 1932, was planned to accommodate 450. In addition, since it was thought to be large enough for growth only "for about the next seven years," it was designed to allow for future enlargement, including extension of the gym to make a double gymnasium, above which would be an auditorium with a seating capacity of about 875 and a cafeteria, plus the addition of classrooms above the wings at each end of the building, expanding the capacity of the building to 870.

When it did come time to enlarge the building, a new scheme was actually put into effect. In 1953, Town Meeting voted to alter the building and convert the junior high into a four-year high school, while the old high school became a two-year junior high.

At this time, following the plan of architect Louis Ross, two wings were added and the interior of the original structure was remodeled. The building was given a new gymnasium and auditorium, and a cafeteria in the wings rather than in the rear.

Already at its opening in September 1956, the building, now the high school, as reported by the school committee, "was then operating over capacity." Planned to accommodate 815 students, it was overcrowded with 1,000.

The solution then was to convert it to a three-year high school. Thus, more students than planned were attending the junior high, and discussions began about a new building. A second junior high was built in 1961. At this time, the existing junior high school was named McCall while the new school was named Lynch.

After the new high school on Skillings Road was finished in 1972, the old high school was altered and renovated for use again as a junior high (while the former junior high became the Lincoln Elementary School), with a capacity for 850 students. The most recent change in its history has been its designation as a middle school.

From the moment its construction was proposed, the McCall building, like other public buildings, has drawn heated discussion over its costs. Debate has also arisen over the merits of a junior high versus a grammar school and versus a middle school. Discussions continue over the size, the cost, the look, and the future of the building. Perhaps the only one point of contention that has passed was that the junior high school concept was a fad.

That's how much each child spends on Back to School costs

According to the 1997 American Express Retail Index on back-to-school shopping, which monitors consumer spending trends in retail and is based on a survey of nearly 1,000 parents and students nationwide, teens and parents will spend an average of $396 on back-to-school items this year. Parents will pick up the majority of the cost, spending an average of $307, with teens contributing another $89.

Parents admit their children have slightly more influence on purchases, making buying decisions 49 percent of the time to their 43 percent. Two-thirds (65%) of parents plan to have their teen accompany them when shopping for back-to-school clothing.

In addition to apparel, which appears on 87 percent of all back-to-school budgets, parents and teens plan to buy the following items: school supplies (85%), textbooks (41%), sporting goods, (26%), computer hardware and software (24%), small appliances/electronics (11%), and furniture (5%).

Now in its third year of surveying back-to-school shoppers, the American Express Retail Index includes teens for the first time. The results show that while 91% of teens do not have to wear a school-sanctioned uniform, they tend to have a consensus on specific preferences for casual clothing.

For example, over three-fourths (76%) of teens surveyed expect to buy jeans/denim pants. Of these, an overwhelming 86 percent want loose-fitting jeans and 80 percent prefer blue over any other color. Levi's were cited as the brand of choice by 40 percent of teens, with Calvin Klein (10%) a distant second for high school and college students. Arizona is the second most popular choice for grade schoolers.

Over 83% cite their own personal style, while elementary school students are more influenced by sports figures, MTV, television shows, musical artists and siblings.

Seven out of ten teens (71%) said finding an item on sale before purchasing it is only somewhat important or not important at all. This indicates brand-loyalty among teens who would rather pay full-price for a specific brand than buy a similar brand on sale.

The top five clothing brands for girls are: Calvin Klein (42%), Levi's (38%), The Gap (38%), Tommy Hilfiger (29%), and Guess (20%). Boys prefer: Levi's (40%), Tommy Hilfiger (31%), Calvin Klein (22%), Polo/Ralph Lauren (21%), and The Gap (16%).

Although 98 percent of back-to-schoolers will begin their shopping as many as four or more weeks before the school year begins, 60 percent will continue to shop after school starts. Reasons cited include time constraints, seasonal fashion changes and a desire to see what is popular. Girls plan to update their school wardrobe an average of nine times during the school year, compared with boys who plan to shop only five additional times.

Most back-to school purchases (62%) will be paid for in cash, along with personal checks (13%) and credit/charge cards (12%). However, credit card use increases sharply for parents of collegians (22%) compared with parents of elementary school students (8%). Perhaps this can be attributed to the more expensive items college students need, such as small appliances, furniture and textbooks.

Wilmington

August 26 Back to School; September 18th Open House

Well, parents, it's that wonderful time of the year again. Get those notebooks purchased and sharpen those number two pencils, because the time when you send the kids back to school to learn the three "R's" (reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic) is quickly approaching.

For the town of Wilmington, the first day of school for all grades will be Tuesday, August 26. Woburn Street School and Shawsheen School will be in session from 8:30 am to 2:30 pm. Wilmington Wildwood School will be in session from 9 am to 3 pm. North Intermediate and West Intermediate School will be in session from 7:40 am to 2:05 pm.

For Wilmington High School, an open house is scheduled on Thursday, September 18 for teacher/parent introductions and early reports on student academic progress. Classes will be held from 7:15 am to 1:45 pm.

During this time, Tewksbury's youth will be able to soak up more sun for another week as their first day of school will begin on Wednesday, September 3. The student hours for all elementary schools, (Heath Brook, Louella F. Dewing, Louise Davy Trahan, and North Street) will be from 9 am to 3 pm. Tewksbury Memorial High will be in session from 7:25 am to 1:57 pm.

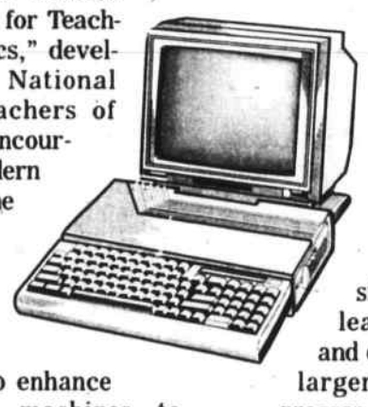

John Wynn Middle School will be in session from 8 am to 2:20 pm. There will also be two open houses in the weeks ahead. The first will be on Thursday, September 11 from 6:30 to 8:30 pm for sixth grade students to hear from teachers and the Junior High School rules and policies. The second open house is for seventh and eighth graders, and will take place on Thursday, September 18, at the same time as the previous.

Bus schedules and upcoming events for all schools will be printed as soon as they are available.

Preparing to succeed, 2 C's added to 3 R's

Preparing students to succeed in the world means helping them master not only the traditional three Rs, but also the two Cs, Calculators and computers - before they graduate from high school.

That's why the "Professional Standards for Teaching Mathematics," developed by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, encourages use of modern technology in the classroom. Used effectively, calculators and computers are tools to enhance discourse, not machines to replace children's thinking. Technology, of course, is not enough; the key is how teachers use it.

Consider the words of one mathematics teacher: "I wanted my students to learn that the sum of the angle measures in a triangle is 180 degrees, so I had them construct a lot of triangles on the computer and record the angle measures.

"The software made it possible to collect a lot of data quickly and make a generalization. I thought my students would remember the relationship better if they discovered it themselves."

The Professional Standards urge the widespread classroom use of computers and calculators as a way to free time for more important work.

Previously, young people spent 80 percent of their time doing simple computation, learning to multiply and divide progressively larger numbers. In the process, the students often lost sight of mathematical insights and discoveries because they became mired in the process of producing the results.

Calculators and computers not only save time, but also give students access to new ways of exploring concepts.

The evidence is unmistakable, NCTM says. Students have an unprecedented need to master calculators and computers if they expect to succeed in all walks of life in the 21st century.

New "Super" search in Burlington

By STEVE DeMARCO

BURLINGTON — When the school doors open for Burlington students Wednesday, Sept. 3, the system will be amid developments that include infrastructural improvements, advances in technology and the search for a new superintendent.

The School Committee has said on more than one occasion this year that Town Meeting was generous in voting to allot money for improvement of the school buildings.

Some of those approved funds include:

• $48,000 to complete a handicapped-accessible playground at the Francis Wyman School, and $50,000 to replace ceiling tiles there.

• $20,000 to battle a termite problem at the Pine Glen School.

• $120,000 for three air conditioning units at Burlington High School (they are up-and-running), and $25,000 for refinishing the gymnasium floor there.

• $25,000 for water-pipe replacement in all the schools.

• Additionally, with Town Meeting's approval of the Sun Microsystems project off Bedford Street (they are constructing a 1.1 million square foot development), comes a commitment from Sun to donate $5 million over five years to the school technology program.

The Memorial Elementary School was wired to the Internet last April and other schools have expressed their interest in getting wired.

Robert Neely departed for Marshfield last month, ending an eight-year run as school superintendent.

The search for a department boss has begun in earnest, and the School Committee has engaged the services of the New England School Development Council (NESDEC) in acting as a consultant in the search.

Public forums are slated to be held in September, from which the school board will solicit input as to what the town wants in a superintendent.

Public interviews of the candidates will follow and the goal of the School Committee is to have a new superintendent by the end of October.

Work is being done to improve air quality at Burlington High School, and a recent study indicated the air quality was fine, with some adjustments needed.

The School Committee voted recently to approve the school improvement plans brought forth by the school councils from each building. Following are some of the highlights:

• Burlington High School is instituting a "work-to-career" program which is going to open up opportunities for alternative education students.

• At the Marshall Simonds Middle School, 33 separate initiatives from teachers on technology improvement could mean a boom in that area; the council hopes to fund at least 15 of them.

• Principal Robert Teel of the Memorial School hopes his students' strong bond with the community will continue to grow, and he attributes the spirit of the community in partnerships to his school's success.

• The Francis Wyman School, coming off a strong reopening year, will work to continue to improve security and home-school communication.

• Principal Stephen Preston of the Pine Glen School will continue to utilize business partnerships (such as IBM) for the purpose of improving technology.

• The Fox Hill School will continue to offer a lecture series that deals with critical parental issues.

For adults

Choosing to return to college can be difficult

This year, and in growing numbers over the past several years, folks who have been out of school for some time are choosing to return, often as freshmen, to prepare for a new career in an entirely new field.

And while "mid-life" freshmen face many of the same challenges as their younger classmates, there are also factors which make it both harder, and easier, to deal with college life.

"It's a pleasure to work with these students," says Professor Mike Ruane who mentors students in the Late Entry Accelerated program (LEAP) at Boston University, one of only three programs in the country in which students who have an undergraduate degree in any field can work toward a graduate degree in engineering. "These are people who have thought long and hard about the risks involved in changing careers. They have clear goals and high motivation. They have, after all, 'bet the farm' on making a successful transition."

It took Diane Kiwior about a year to make the decision. She had been teaching math in central Pennsylvania for eleven years, and throughout that time would recommend engineering to her brightest students. "If it's such a good field," they would ask her, "why aren't you doing it yourself?"

With two daughters, one in college and other in high school, it was not an easy decision for Diane. "You think, how can I change careers now? It means uprooting my family, taking a major financial risk. What if it doesn't work out?

Virginia Nivola, a painting major at the School for the Arts at Boston University, literally leaped into a new life. "I'd studied intellectual history, religion and literature, and nearly completed a master's degree," says Virginia. "I taught English in high school for a time, but really had concentrated on raising my sons. When they both left home, one to college the other to boarding school, I really need to take stock and decide what to do with my life."

Managing financially was a major factor for both women. For Virginia it meant juggling classes-and not always being able to take all of the electives she wanted. Diane, as a participant in the LEAP program, had full scholarship support and some income as a research assistant in Ruane's lab, but it meant a drastic change in lifestyle.

And both women enjoyed being in class with students who were the same age as their own children. "the camaraderie of the class was exciting," says Virginia. "I had immense fun with the other students, working together late into the night We joked around a lot, but within the context of doing a lot of very serious, hard work.

Although it can be a challenge for a returning adult to adjust to the rhythm of exams, labs and papers, most people who know what they want. They have developed life skills such as tie management that help them succeed, and they do.

Lice, more a nuisance than a health problem

My child picked up head lice at day care. How can I prevent this from happening again?

Contrary to popular thought, head lice is not necessarily a sign of uncleanliness or poor health habits. In fact, it is less a health threat than it is a nuisance. According to the National Pediculosis Association, head lice infestation can occur in people of all ages and both sexes. The problem of head lice is most prevalent in young school children; some public health groups estimate that 12 million youngsters are infected annually.

Known by entomologists as pediculus humanus varcapitis, head lice are blood-sucking parasites. These grayish-colored insects are about the size of a sesame seed and can thrive only in human scalp and hair.

They hatch from small eggs, called nits, which are attached to the base of individual hairs. The eggs hatch in about 10 days, with the new lice reaching maturity in about two weeks. Head lice proliferate quickly-female lice can lay about 90 eggs in their 20-to-30-day lifetime - so the problem needs to be treated promptly.

"One of the reasons for the spread of head lice is overcrowding," says Candace Lapidus, MD, FAAP, director of Pediatric and Adolescent Dermatology at Boston Medical Center and assistant professor of pediatrics and dermatology at Boston University School of Medicine. "That is why you often see outbreaks in day care centers and schools."

Persistent itching of the head and the back of the neck can indicate head lice infestation. Parents should look for nits which can be seen by the naked eye but are best identified with the aid of a magnifying glass attached to individual hairs Lapidus says that most cases of head lice are diagnosed when children visit their physicians for scalp infections caused by vigorous itching.

Treatment for head lice begins with shampooing a child's hair with one of several over-the-counter products designed to kill the lice and nits. Most of these products rely on permethrin as an active ingredient since it is non-toxic for humans. Regular shampoos and those medicated to treat dandruff or other skin problems will not solve the problem. Hair should then be combed with a fine-tooth comb to remove the nits. If the lice develop a resistance to these products, your child's physician may prescribe a more powerful treatment product.

Creativity

It can be a stress reliever

When was the last time you slaved over a banner, invitation or project to get the pizzazz you were looking for — without the stress of just getting it done?

Has it been awhile? If so, you might just need a creative boost to take the edge off.

Did you know that "creativity" enhances the thought process, evening out the workload of your brain? Projects, like designing signs or banners, actually can be soothing after a stressful day at school.

Contrary to popular belief, you don't need to be artistic to be creative. You need three main things: 1) relaxation 2) imagination and 3) the right tools that let the first two happen.

For tools that promote creativity, look beyond tradition. Typical paints, brushes, markers, glitter and glue result in the dreaded "mess" that inhibits relaxation and imaginative thinking. Look for unique, revolutionized tools that make life easier.

Fiskars, the company that pioneered those comfortable, orange-handled scissors, offers some alterna-tives to traditional painting and decorating. Its new line of washable tempera paint markers feature a nondrying applicator tip that glides thick paint onto a surface using the same motion as an ordinary marker. However, there are some major differences — colors can be mixed without ruining the tip, the paint won't drip or spill, and there is no need for a paintbrush.

Also, look for Fiskars glitter glue pens, which can be squeezed to release the desired amount of glitter glue — all in one — without the mess. Complement your paint and glitter-glue designs with decorative edges using paper edgers with long blades and comfortable handles. They work like scissors, only they give you a neat, decorative cut with one squeezing motion.

Once you're all geared up, you can relax and let your ideas flow. That sign for the next pep rally, football game or school dance can be completed without the agony of self-defeat and in a fraction of the time.

Use it as an outlet for relieving stress. After all, creativity should be fun. Besides, anyone can be creative with the right tools.

Remember, creativity is therapeutic to the soul.

Student handbook changes in Winchester

By LAURA JOHNSON

WINCHESTER - Winchester High School students could be subject to slightly different school policies next year as a result of proposed changes to the student handbook.

Students found to be under the influence of alcohol or drugs at a school dance will be barred from participation in extracurricular activities for a minimum of 60 days. Students would also be barred from participation in sports for a minimum of four weeks or four games, whichever is greater.

This is a change from the current newly-instituted policy which bars a student from participation in sports for an entire season and in extracurricular activities for an entire semester.

Morse said that when formulating the current policy, students advised her that strict consequences were necessary to deter students from drinking. However, school officials are worried that barring a student from such activities may result the removal of the structure that a student needs to steer dear of drugs and alcohol.

Morse pointed out that many surrounding communities that have established such strict policies have backed down from them for litigious reasons.

Under a new policy, students would be able to make up work missed during suspensions, but would get 50 percent credit for the work. For example, a test score of 80 would be graded as a 40.

A student who is absent from 10 or more classes during a semester would lose credit points for that course. If the student passes the course, then he or she would not be required to repeat the course but would be required to take another course in the same discipline to make up the lost credits.

A new varsity sports policy has been designed to give coaches some leeway to use their own judgment in deciding when and in what capacity a student may play on a team. The current policy states that a student who misses practices or games during a vacation period cannot be assigned to a different or lesser position when he or she returns. The proposed new language is designed to allow a students to remain in the position remain in the position he or she played while filling in for an absent student. Superintendent Dr. Carol Eaton commented, "I hope we're not trying to design a nuclear weapon here, when a fly-swatter is necessary."

McCall principal Evander French said the middle school handbooks were changed only to ensure that the policy language legally complies with the standards of the state Education Reform Act passed in 1993. The language changes are primarily in sections regarding student conduct, which encompass topics such as possession of weapons, drugs and alcohol, violence and harassment.

Committee member Sarah Swiger suggested sending a letter to parents outlining school policy regarding weapons, drugs and alcohol, and harassment in particular. "These changes are really here for the adults. The kids are much more aware of (the changes in attitudes toward issues of harassment)," said Swiger. "Parents have some real surprises coming."

French said, "Today, harassment is not something you just live with. It's against the law. It's something we need to work on in the schools and in the broader community."

French said that aside from school rules, the substantial spiral-bound handbooks include study tips and charts for students to record homework assignments.

Smart study habits can lead to better grades

Every year, millions of students sit through long lectures and lengthy study sessions, endure all-nighters, and suffer pre-exam stress — all for the sake of getting good grades. However, the key to academic success isn't always to study harder. Instead, students should study smarter.

The amount of time spent studying varies for everyone. While some students devote up to four hours a day preparing for one subject, others study only a few hours each week for all of their courses. Many students also have to manage a part-time job, extracurricular campus activities and, of course, a social life.

"The most common concern among students is they don't have enough time to study for all of their subjects," says Carol Hiles, director, Campus Learning Assistance Services, University of California Santa Barbara. "Studying is like any other discipline — it's a skill that's learned and takes a lot of practice."

Hiles recommends setting a schedule that includes studying for each class a little bit every day, instead of cramming it all into one drawn-out session. She says, "If a student budgets his or her time wisely, it's much easier to focus on each subject."

Additionally, studying in the same place on a regular basis establishes a consistent pattern. To make the most of each session, study in a library or other area where they are comfortable and free from distractions. If studying in a dorm room or apartment, use tools like an answering machine to screen calls and avoid the temptation to chat with friends.

"Students today have an advantage over students of just 10 years ago," says Dennis Cox, vice president of marketing at Casio PhoneMate in Torrance, Calif. "Affordable technology is within reach now, giving students the virtual capability of being in two places at once. Products like Casio PhoneMate's TA-116 digital answering machine and CP-725 cordless phone with call waiting caller ID display are practical time-management solutions."

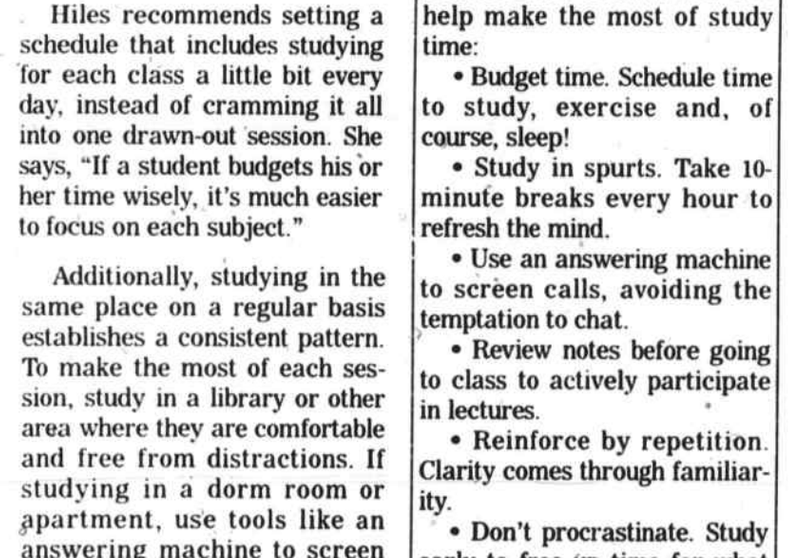

Casio PhoneMate's TA-116 screens calls and has a message Time/Day Stamp and Remote Operation so that messages from study partners can be retrieved when calling home from the library or student union. The 25-channel CP-725 cordless phone with caller ID displays the number of an incoming call, even while the phone is in use.

The TA-116 digital answering machine and CP-725 cordless phone, both compact and easy to use, are affordably priced to fit comfortably within a student's budget.

Finally, don't forget to schedule time for fun and relaxation. After all, once the school years are finally finished, the work really begins.

To successfully travel the academic road, these tips from UCSB's Carol Hiles and Casio PhoneMate's Dennis Cox will help make the most of study time:

- Budget time. Schedule time to study, exercise and, of course, sleep!
- Study in spurts. Take 10-minute breaks every hour to refresh the mind.
- Use an answering machine to screen calls, avoiding the temptation to chat.
- Review notes before going to class to actively participate in lectures.
- Reinforce by repetition. Clarity comes through familiarity.
- Don't procrastinate. Study early to free up time for what you enjoy.
- Keep a notepad nearby to jot down random thoughts while studying.
- Use time between classes wisely. These hours are ideal for studying.
- Be persistent. People who ultimately succeed understand success is a long-term commitment.

Fearing the freshman 15 is a heavy topic in college

Many students enter college fearing the legendary "Freshmen 15," the pounds some students supposedly gain during their first year away from home. But according to Judy Pierson, counselor at Boston University's Martin Luther King Counseling Center, some students can end up with a fate far worse than the Freshmen 15 if they become obsessed with dieting and develop anorexia, bulimia or compulsive overeating.

At summer orientation sessions, Pierson says the Freshmen 15 is already on incoming students' minds. "The two major concerns I heard students talking abut were whether they would get along with their roommates and gain weight at college," she says. "The fear of gaining weight and the extreme measures students may take to control it can start them down the road to an eating disorder."

Pierson says it's not unusual for students to struggle with food issues at college. "Many students have cut ties with important people in their lives. They are going through a difficult transition with increased demands and expectations," she said. "If they're feeling overwhelmed by their environment, one thing they may feel they can control is their weight."

In a culture that equates success and happiness with thinness, it's easy to focus on dieting instead of the underlying issue. "Dieting, binging, purging, and compulsive exercising are simply ways of taking control," Pierson explains

Pierson offers students the following tips for keeping food and weight issues in check during the adjustment to college life:

Realize thinness doesn't equal attractiveness or social acceptance. "The most attractive quality a person can have is self-confidence," says Pierson.

"They feel good about themselves, they're lively and fun, and they're going to pull people in like a magnet."

Don't diet-it's not an effective way to lose weight. "Dieting robs you of your energy and draws you into a world where two things exist - you and food,"

Mathmatics is hot topic in Reading schools

By KATHLEEN BRENNAN

READING - Fifth grade students can expect to be given a math test when they enter school this fall, a test that could or could not affect the elementary mathematics curriculum systemwide.

The test is a direct result of the question that the group Concerned Parents of Reading has posed to the School Committee. That question being - is Reading's math program, which is called Chicago Math or Everyday Math, helping or hurting students' math skills and preparing them for future mathematic study?

No clear answers came from the two hour debate on the topic at Monday night's School Committee meeting, but CPR did get three of their requests partially dealt with.

"The kids are better off because of this," School Committee member Susan Cavicchi said of the curriculum discussion and CPR's concern for their children's learning.

promised at the meeting. If the tests scores are low, there will be further investigation into Chicago Math, which could lead to its termination in Reading if the study results are negative.

It was discovered, Associate Superintendent Dennis Richards said, that there is not curriculum continuity within the school system, which is something that CPR had accused the school system of. Teachers and administration will be meeting on this problem this summer, Richards said. They will be discussing all subjects, he added, but mathematics will be given special attention because of the recent skepticism.

CPR requested that the anonymous teacher's surveys be released. Harutunian said he is working with the teachers to meet that request, but said many teachers are opposed to releasing the anonymous surveys.

The school administration did agree to increase professional development in the mathematics area and to hold a Math Night in the fall of 1997 for teachers, students and parents.

CPR requested at the meeting that a task force be made up of professional consultants should study Chicago Math, which has many proponents and opponents not only in Reading but nationwide. This request was not accepted. CPR also requested that expansion of Chicago Math be suspended until testing is complete and for the continuation of supplemental teaching of traditional math skills until it is determined whether Chicago Math is a valid curriculum.

"Reading may indeed by buying a lemon," Robert Mandell, D.M.D., M.M.Sc., of the parental group said. Mandell quoted many sources that renounce Chicago Math. "This is a highly experimental program. I did not agree to my son becoming an education experiment."

CPR was formed by a group of parents concerned that their children were less knowledgeable of basic math than their older siblings at their age. They accuse the program of not teaching basic mathematic skills rather promoting the use of a calculator.

The lack of continuity was another accusation. Many parents claimed that some third grade students were not being taught their multiplication tables.

"When I hear a teacher is not teaching multiplication tables, I'm just as concerned as the parents," Richards said. He went on to talk about the summer curriculum study.

Richards also defended Reading's teaching of basic skills, saying one of the reasons Chicago Math was chosen by the school system was for its strong emphasis on the teaching and application of basic math skills.

Chicago Math was adopted by Reading as the elementary schools' mathematics program after a 16 person mathematics committee was formed and had studied a number of options for Reading.

Former Principal Charles Papandreau applauds the decision that was made four years ago.

"We have raised the standard. The curriculum is stimulating and challenging. Supplementing skills is easy. I think it is a beautiful program," Papandreau, a 24-year veteran principal said.

The School Committee will be revisiting this issue later in the year.

"Reading may indeed be buying a lemon"

The group's first request was to have the students' math skills tested. That way, disputes over whether there is or is not a problem with math in Reading's elementary schools would cease.

In late September, the fifth grade students will be tested on their math skills, Superintendent Harry Harutunian

A year of change in No. Reading schools

By Leeann R. Bonaventura
North Reading Transcript

This past year has been a busy one for the North Reading school system. New faces and new design plans are giving the schools a fresh look.

Pamela Christodoulo was appointed as the new principal of the Batchelder Elementary School, to replace retiring principal Neal Sanders.

Christodoulo is the former vice principal of the Dracut Middle School and she assumed her duties July 1.

Another new addition to North Reading is Virginia L. Warn, the school system's first Director of Curriculum and Technology.

Warn will work with teachers, department chairs and principals to improve the K-12 curriculum, with a special emphasis on the use of technology to improve instruction and student learning.

North Reading has not only seen new faces, but some face lifts as well.

The Batchelder School, which was built in 1917, may not be around for much longer. At the April Town Meeting, funds were approved to cover the cost of schematic design plans for a new elementary school.

The proposed school may be built on land owned by the School Committee and would include 29 classrooms built on 62,974 square feet of land to accommodate 540 full-time students.

The construction of the building should cost just less than $10 million and North Reading would receive a 64% reimbursement from the state.

Voters at the October Town Meeting will be asked to authorize construction of the new school and to approve its price tag. If approved, construction on the new school could begin in the spring of 1998.

Overcrowding and the deteriorating condition of the Batchelder have been the main reasons cited to build a new elementary school.

Two modular classrooms were delivered to the Batchelder School in late June. The classrooms were needed to ease overcrowding.

The Little Elementary School will be bit bigger thanks to a $3.4 million renovation plan to add eight instructional spaces, a new library and a redesigned parking lot. After the reconstruction, the kindergarten area will have its own wing, entrance and play area separate from the older children.

erson says. "It's a self-defeating trap."

Befriend your appetite, don't make it your enemy. Listen to what it's telling you. Learn the difference between body hunger and "emotional hunger." When you feel like overeating, ask yourself "what am I really hungry for?" If you're lonely, call home or see a friend. If you're stressed about calculus, call academic support services for tutoring. If you're feeling isolated, visit campus counseling services.

Avoid the guilt-denial cycle: "I had four pieces of pizza so I'm not going to eat anything tomorrow." Accept that you may have overeaten and move on. Eat the next time you feel physically hungry.

Find "user-friendly" exercise that's fun for you. If running is pure drudgery, try rollerblading.

Take advantage of social opportunities on your residence hall floor and activities offered on campus.

Write about your feelings in a journal.

Build your self-esteem. Write down three things you like about yourself and read it twice a day. "That's one concrete way to build confidence," says Pierson. If you feel out-of-control with food or dieting, get help from campus support services.

"The bottom lines is for students to worry less about their weight, and more about reaching out and getting connected at school," says Pierson. "Concentrate less on food, and more on doing well academically. Use common sense about what's good to eat, don't beat yourself up for eating treats, and save your energy for living life."

Portability made easier

Look at all the things your binder can hold! It's obvious that portability ranks right up there. So, how about a paper trimmer that is compact and safe enough to carry in your school binder? Fiskars, the company known for scissors, offers the Personal Paper Trimmer for cutting on the go. Whether you're starting your cut in the center of the paper, making strips for weaving a project or simply trimming a sheet in half for your next quiz, this handy transparent rail, which includes an English/metric ruler, holds paper firmly in place while making straight, accurate cuts. You can find this trimmer in stores for around $14. Call Fiskars Consumer Affairs Department at (715) 842-2091 for a store near you. Remember, this school year, look for tools that make your life easier!

Woburn contract negotiations are tough and lengthy

WOBURN — Because negotiations dragged on so long, the last of the outstanding school union contracts was just signed off on this past June, three years after it had expired.

School officials must now turn around and begin negotiating anew as the contracts expire at the end of this coming school year.

The Middle Administrators contract is already under discussion and is nearing agreement; while informal discussions with teachers about how bargaining might be approached (as opposed to the actual details of negotiations) have also already begun.

The other unions will follow.

The transportation contract, which has caused so much furor, now appears finally settled with legal options being exhausted and the actual document signed.

However, while Fiore Bus Service is expected to be driving the routes when classes begin Sept. 3, the acrimony generated by North Suburban Transportation losing the contract may have longer-term effects.

The brother of North Suburban owner John Devine, Thomas Devine, has reportedly taken out nomination papers to run for a seat on the School Committee; at least one other possible candidate, Patricia Dyer, unsuccessful in her 1995 bid, has also taken out papers.

At least one new face will grace the School Committee starting in January as incumbent Michael Scire announced he will not seek re-election; two other veteran members have yet to pull papers.

While the School Committee itself faces a changing make-up, for the first time in many years the school leadership is in place with no principal or senior administrative hirings anticipated.

One of the first things requiring school department attention this fall will be finding $100,000 in budget cuts (the City Council cut $150,000 from the School Department budget, the committee already removed a $50,000 capital improvement figure as the council indicated that should be part of a larger city capital improvement plan).

Also on a priority track is the high school's accreditation visit this October.

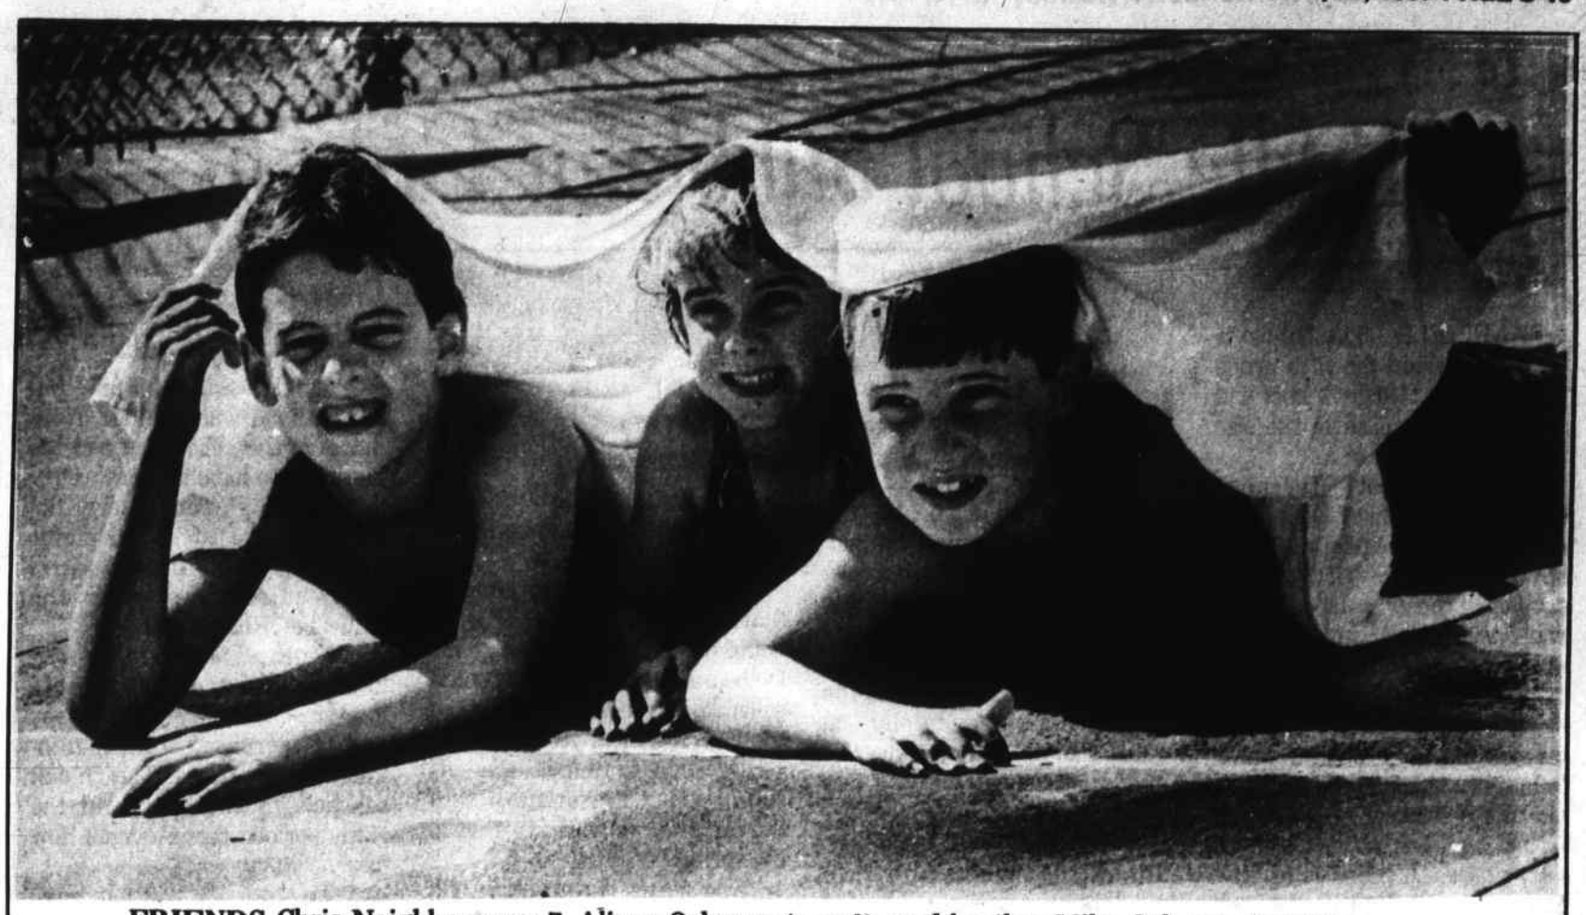

Schools are accredited every 10 years and must meet educational and facility standards, or show improvement toward reaching approved goals, or face losing accreditation, such as occurred in Lawrence.

Colleges look to accreditation to ensure the quality and validity of high schools' diplomas.

Related and longer-term items on school officials' plates are addressing the facilities upgrade and utilization issues and lack of progress toward compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requirements.

The former issue has stalled at the City Hall level; while the latter may be laid at the feet of the School Committee and administration.

Also on the agenda for the coming school year is continuing implementation of the district-wide technology plan. Great strides were made over the past year, but a large amount of capital and dedicated effort will be needed to keep it up.

Curing "school-phobia"

(MS) — "School is stupid, and I'm never going back!" "I'm scared to go to school, so I'm not going." Comments like these can be a sign of school avoidance, sometimes called school phobia.

There are at least three types of school avoidance. Each type calls for a unique approach and set of solutions.

1. Negative experience at school — School can be traumatic for reasons that are not strictly academic. For example, children might avoid school because they're bullied on the playground or maliciously teased in class. Others may worry about being humiliated over poor grades, letting their parents down or living up to the standards of an older sibling.

2. Overpersonalized thinking — School avoidance also can stem from family problems, like a seriously ill sibling. Some children feel personally responsible. These children say to themselves, "There's a problem at home, and it must be my fault."

3. Unconscious conflict — A third type of school avoidance results when children try to resolve a conflict between contradictory personal impulses or wishes. Often, this conflict takes place below the level of conscious awareness.

Here are some solutions to these types of school avoidance

- Meet with teachers and school administrators to ensure that bullying stops.
- Help children make new friends.
- Let children know that they're not to blame for family problems.
- Remind children that they're loved for reasons other than high grades.
- Teach children that anger, jealousy and hate are normal emotions — and that people can feel these emotions without acting on them.

"It's important for parents to have open communication with their child, be connected to the child's everyday world of experience and show a genuine interest in the child's point of view," adds Dr. Milliner.

At 5th grade level

Middle School bubble at Galvin

Middlesex East REGIONAL
Back to School edition

By DOUG WOOD-BOYLE

WAKEFIELD - The bubble is on the move and the fifth grade at the Galvin Middle School will see a large increase in the size of the class this year.

Superintendent Terrance Holmes reports that 350 students are expected to enter the Galvin Middle School's fifth grade increasing the school's census to over 1,100. New Acting Principal Dr. Paula Mullen is prepared for the influx of students.

The school will see some major changes with former principal Margaret McGrath moving over to the Dolbeare School and Dr. Mullen taking her place. Because of the Education Reform Act the incoming fifth graders and the sixth grade will be the first to have science every day.

Physical changes at the Galvin include two new computer laboratories and the completion of the work to install a new boiler in the school. The job was finished at a cost of $200,000.

Supt. Holmes said that the real major changes in physical plants took place at the Greenwood School where a new sprinkler system and a new fire alarm system was installed. Also installed this summer was new lighting, a new oil tank, and a new intercom system.

"We made the Greenwood the focus of our renovations," Holmes said, because our education plan calls for it to be in use another 12-years."

It is that same education plan that is the reason for McGrath being named as principal of the Dolbeare School. That school is scheduled to close at the end of the 1997-'98 school year.

According to Holmes, the bids should go out by November with the preliminary work starting in the spring.

"The major construction will not start until the children are out for the summer," Holmes said.

He noted that students from the Dolbeare will be transferred to the Hurd School for the 1998-'99 School Year. In September, 1999, the Dolbeare will reopen and those students in the Hurd and the Montrose schools will then attend the new school.

For the coming year, a new All Day Kindergarten program will commence at the Yeuell School. The program will be fee supported.

The school system will also expand the after school programs at the Franklin and Greenwood schools. The programs take care of children from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Franklin School Principal James Boyd will continue in his duties at the school but add the Montrose to his charge as well.

At the high school level the major change is the full implementation of the time in learning requirements under the Education Reform Act.

Holmes explained that students will have a 17-minute longer school day and classes will be increased from 48-minutes to 73-minutes. The "block scheduling will do away with the study periods that students now have.

"The students will not have as much free time," Holmes said. "The law now requires more directed learning activities instead of study periods."

According to Holmes the School Department has been planning for the change over the past two years.

Physically the school has received a new carpet in the John A. Volpe Library and the walls of the Library and the Charbonneau Field House have been painted.

The School Year is scheduled to start on Wednesday, September 3 and teachers are to report on Tuesday, September 2.

THE MOST IMPORTANT LETTERS WHEN IT COMES TO DRUGS

Teaching your children the ABC's is fine, but you also need to teach them about drug abuse and the special importance of the letters "NO." Teach them the drug alphabet early in life, and help them from becoming another statistic in America's fastest growing disease--drug and alcohol addiction. Let them learn their ABC's in school, but teach them their "NO'S" at home.

ANTHONY MANCONI

FDA Engineer Jim DiNovo said, "cows may come and Cows may go but the Bull in Woodchips goes on Forever!"

Folks, if you continue reading, you may agree with Jim DiNovo.

Blackie Vega's credit rating has gone down to a Triple "Z". It means be careful, even if he intends to pay Cash!

Dolly Parton has a tooth cavity but her dentist can't get close enough to drill. Dolly had to give up playing the accordion for the same. reason.

A doctor teaching a medical student said, "this young boy was born with one leg shorter than the other. He Limps. What would you do in his case?" The Med. Student replied, "I guess I would Limp too!"

My cousin Angelo Quagenti takes a bottle of aspirins with him when he goes fishing in case he gets a Haddock.

I remember when I said to Kathy's father, "Sir, I would like to marry your daughter." "Can you support a family?" he asked. "Yes," I replied, "I'm a supervisor in the Boston Naval Shipyard." "Very good, besides Kathy there are four of us!"

Will Rogers said years ago what is True today, "What this country needs are "dirtier fingernails" and Cleaner Minds."

When Yogi Berra was asked if anyone of the old neighborhood in Brooklyn ever meet at the corner lunchroom, Yogi sadly replied, "Naw! Nobody goes there anymore, it's too crowded!"

A little boy at Revere Beach was running into the water, filling up a small beach pail and running back to throw the water into a hole he had dug in the sand. (He told me he was going to put all the water in the ocean in that hole). "I know you can do it," I said and I continued walking along the surf. About a half-hour later I returned, the kid was still running back and forth, but it was taking a little longer for the tide had gone out quite a bit. "How are you doing?" I asked. "What are you stupid?" he exclaimed, "can't you see I've already taken so much water, the ocean is half empty?"

Two seagulls flying up high, one said to the other, "Hey Ecliff, have you Spotted any New Cars lately?"

Elephants are NOT allowed on the Beach-they had trouble keeping their trunks up last year.

Folks, I remember when a girl reached the age of sixteen years ago, a daily litany could be heard in most Italian homes. "Get Married, Get Married, what do you want to be an old maid?" But, boy oh boy it sure was a lot different for a male member of the family. When my cousin Mario told his mother that he met a wonderful girl and he was going to ask her to marry him, Aunt Angelina almost fainted. When she recovered, she yelled, screamed and shouted, "are you crazy Mario? You're only 39 years old."

My friend Joe Ravida told his landlord, someday, people will point out where I live and say, "This is where the handsome movie star, Joe Ravida used to live." The landlord exclaimed, "people will be saying that tomorrow if you don't pay the last six months rent by this afternoon!"

When Ryan Powers took the larger piece of the two pieces of apple pie, his brother Richie shouted, "You're NO gentleman Ryan! I would have taken the smaller piece and left the larger one for you!" Ryan snapped back with, "I don't know what you're complaining about, I left the smaller piece you want for you didn't I?"

George Gould told me "Chipper, I learned my Virtues at my mother's knee, my vices at the Joints!"

Officer Richie Serino rang a doorbell and heard a weak voice, "I'm sorry, I can't come to the door, I'm in the bath, what do you want?" Officer Serino shouted through the mail slot, "your husband was run over by a steamroller." "O'kay", she replied, "please slide him in under the door!"

Arthur DeYoung told the shoe salesman, "I don't want shoes for running. I don't want shoes for walking. I just want comfortable shoes for standing or sitting down."

Dennis Tully received a Dear John Letter and was asked to return the girl's photo. Dennis asked Artie Perrin, Joe Ravida, Eric Olsen and Mick Ferrante for spare photos of their girl friends. Dennis mailed them to his former girlfriend with this note, "I received your Dear John letter, but I forgot what you looked like-so-please look at the enclosed photos, pick yours out and send the rest back to me."

Girls, the Catch of the week is, Jimmy Brennan, Jr. Go get him!

A ROPE SWING is one of the better ways to relax and enjoy the summer fun at Silver Lake in Wilmington.
